Carmel ponders own water formula

By MICHAEL GARDNER

TAKING A hint from the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, the city of Carmel soon may develop a water allocation formula of its own.

The proposal now under preparation by Carmel Planner Brian Roseth would allocate the available city water supply to the four major categories of users: single family residences, apartments and condominiums, businesses, and the city.

The city must do something soon about its water use because the latest water district figures indicate that Carmel used 98.7 percent of its allocation of 1,030.8 ac. ft. of water. (There are 325,851 gallons of water in an acre foot.)

If the city uses 100 percent of its allocation, the water district board of directors has the authority to impose a moratorium on all new water connections, which in effect would halt building in the city.

The city has an "adequate" water conservation program already in place which does not allow new building to exceed 5 percent of the water consumption of the previous use on the site, Roseth said.

The ordinance also requires retro-fitting showers, sinks and toilets to save water and prohibits washing down sidewalks in the commercial zone.

However the stickler is how to manage the little water still available.

Roseth's idea is for the city to adopt an allocation formula of its own.

The single-family residential district accounted for most of the water consumption in Carmel. In calendar year 1983 the residential zone used 44.5 percent of the available water compared to 45.4 percent in 1982.

Commercial businesses used 37.2 percent of the available water supply in 1983. In 1982 businesses consumed 36.5 percent of the water.

Residents in apartments and condominiums (R-4 zone) accounted for 6.5 percent of the use in 1983 compared to 6.6 percent in 1982.

The city share of water use in 1983 was 1.3 percent compared to 1.1 percent in 1982.

(The figures do not add up to 98.7 percent because the individual breakdown of water use is based on calendar year figures provided by the California American Water Co. The district allocation figure of 98.7 percent is based on the water year of June 30, 1983 to July 1, 1984.)

•

ROSETH PLANS to compile data about use and how it is affected by three factors: the economy, buildout and rainfall factors.

HEATHER GLENN is one of several complexes now under construction in Carmel. However, because of increasing water supply problems, the city may enact measures that would severly restrict the types of new businesses that can open. (Michael Gardner photo.)

To prepare an adquate analysis of how much water should be allocated to the four uses, it is important to analyze the different factors involved, Roseth explained in an interview with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook.

Water use in a good economic year will increase because more tourists will be in the city, he said.

That in turn would spur increased commercial development that creates more water demands.

The city has to look at the buildout potential when considering water allocations, he said.

The buildout analysis needs to be based on the kind of development the city wants rather than judging water use on what can be constructed in the city now, Roseth said.

For example, to "target" the water allocation for the R-4 zone, the city needs to know just how much low and moderate-cost housing it wants constructed, he said.

Then the allocation formula for the R-4 zone actually would have two separate figures: the percentage of water for the higher cost housing and a certain amount of water to be set aside for low and moderate-cost units, Roseth said.

Rainfall also is important in any long-range planning for a city water allocation system, he believes.

Roseth pointed out that in the dry six months of 1984 city water use rose 10 percent as compared to the same time in 1983.

"That was a real shocker to me seeing the variation just because of the weather," he said.

Roseth's analytical task is not an easy one because the water district and Cal-Am do not keep uniform water figures.

The difference in figures is quite interesting, according to Roseth.

The water district has Carmel consumption at 98.7 percent for fiscal year 1983-84. However, Cal-Am figures indicate the city used just 89.4 percent of its allocation in the calendar year 1983.

But since the water district is the agency that governs water availability, its figures are used despite the detriment to Carmel.

The higher water use reported by the district means that Carmel has only about 13-acre feet of water left as an emergency reserve or for future water meter connections.

For example, if Carmel uses the same amount of water in 1984-85, then there is little room for future commercial expansion.

A 100-seat restaurant uses about three acre feet of water annually, Roseth said.

And future tenants of the now-under-construction 12-unit apartment complex on Torres Street are expected to use up to three acre feet of water annually, he said.

Howard Brunn vacillates

Dear Editor:

Gunnar Norberg's somewhat confusing line of reasoning ("Conscience of Carmel," Oct. 18) made a virtue of the fact that Howard Brunn once opposed the Hatton Canyon Freeway "unhesitatingly," even though he apparently supports it now.

It is, in fact, this kind of vacillation on the Hatton Canyon Freeway and other important issues by Mr. Brunn that has convinced me to support Karin Strasser Kauffman for Fifth District supervisor. We need a representative like Mrs. Strasser Kauffman who will stay firm on her commitments.

Arnold/Kauffman way?

Dear Editor:

In reviewing the candidacy statements of the two individuals competing for supervisor of the Fifth district, I note with pleasure that Howard Brunn has made a flat statement that he favors the Hatton Canyon Freeway extension. Karin Strasser Kauffman has been quoted in the past as favoring the freeway extension but she fails to make that pledge in the formal statement given to all voters as part of their sample ballot information.

It may well be that she doesn't want to offend any supporters who voted for her in the primary. It could be that she doesn't want to take definitive stands in writing to all voters as a matter of principle. Or it may be that she has changed her mind and doesn't want that fact noted.

What gives this voter the feeling that the latter rationale may pertain is the recent public endorsement of Strasser Kauffman by Helen Arnold, member of the Carmel City Council. Mrs. Arnold in recent letters extolled Mr. Brunn for his fine service on the Carmel council at the same time that Mrs. Arnold was a member.

This would have appeared as an endorsement of Mr. Brunn's qualifications for further elective office (something Strasser Kauffman has never held). But at the end of her letter Mrs. Arnold at last came out in support of Strasser Kauffman, the candidate with no elective experience over a candidate with experience whom she had chosen to compliment. Makes me — and you, I would think — wonder why.

As there are few issues that county supervisors have a say on that directly affect the city of Carmel (but one of those issues surely is whether the state should build the freeway extension), Mrs. Arnold's endorsement does give me pause for consideration.

Does Mrs. Arnold know something about Strasser Kauffman that the rest of us don't? Is Strasser Kauffman a "closet" opponent of the freeway who will come out in opposition if she is elected? Why didn't Strasser Kauffman make the same commitments in writing to specific programs that Mr. Brunn did?

Who cares about Reagan/Mondale? Kauffman/Brunn is lots more fun. And just a few local voters can tip the scales one way or the other. What is the Arnold/Kauffman way?

Trust Howard Brunn

Dear Editor:

Was it a coincidence that I found a note from "Karin" stuck in my door the day I returned home to find not only was my Howard Brunn poster ripped from my fence but all the other Howard Brunn posters in the block had been torn down too! The note said, "I am sorry I missed you — Karin."

Her "poop" sheet stated: "a leader we can trust." Under the circumstances I wouldn't, would you?

I recommend you put your trust in Howard Brunn and elect him to the office of supervisor for which he is so well qualified.

Brunn was there

Dear Editor:

Rod Holmgren, in his recent letter to your paper about the supertanker issue, is quite correct when he states that Col. John Adsit made the decision to halt supertankers from coming into Monterey Bay. It was his jurisdiction.

It was Howard Brunn who headed a delegation from the peninsula to San Francisco; held meetings with Col. Adsit, and after many hours came out with the agreement from Col. Adsit to rescind the permit for PG&E to build the tanker port, overruling the Coastal Commission.

Many folks played an important part in this effort. When final action and leadership was needed, Howard Brunn was there.

Prop. 37 no tax

Dear Editor:

I find it very disturbing to read the newspaper editorials, watch television commercials and other media and find no information whatsoever pro-lottery. Are we a democracy? Is the news media unbiased? I have had to do my own detective work in order to draw a fair assessment. This is what I've found.

The anti-lottery campaign is expensive and extensive. Who pays for this? It's the race track owners and profiteers — which includes the owners of race horses. They're worried the lottery would take away from their take at the race track. That alone is pretty interesting!

Also, citizens who want to bet in the lottery are going to spend the money whether it's in California or New York. They might as well keep the money right here. And if they're on food stamps and buying lottery tickets it won't change things. Let's keep the revenue in California; we need it desperately.

Our educational system is falling apart and the money brought in by the lottery (34 percent plus) will go toward education. The government will see to that because the lottery is closely watched and monitored as it is in Washington, D.C. A five-member commission plus director is appointed by the governor and confirmed by the state Senate. The commission is responsible for a quarterly report and oversees the operations. Their job is extensive and can be read about in the California Ballot Pamphlet.

Everybody profits, creating new jobs and incentives. Fifty percent of the sales go for prizes, not more than 16 percent is used for administrative costs (including commissions to sellers of lottery tickets) and the rest goes into a fund for education. Eighty percent of the fund will go to K-12 schools, 13 percent to community colleges, 5 percent to California State University and 2 percent to the University of California. Any citizen who wishes can check on the funds and where they're going any time they want.

The lottery belongs to the people. And if someone, perhaps you or I, gets rich in the process, sharing the wealth (which is exempt from state tax but not federal tax), then what is wrong with that? It's working in 17 other states. Check around. The lottery is not run by a bunch of incompetents. Read your California Ballot Pamphlet on Proposition 37 carefully and do some research, don't leave it up to the media to tell you what to do. Prop. 37 is not a tax! The lottery is not a fly-by-night affair, so let's be fair and tell both sides of the tale!

'Horribly aging juveniles'

Dear Editor:

Vice President Bush's reference to the debate with Geraldine Ferraro as "kicking a little ass" and his giggly, snickering refusal to retract this calculated slur is not only disgusting beyond words.

What must not pass unnoticed is how it reveals the shallow, schoolboy vulgarity, immaturity and insensitivity that lurks not only behind Bush's awkward attempt to look like a "macho" leader but also behind the ostensible "leadership" stance of his master, Reagan, and other Reaganites.

It calls to mind former Interior Secretary James Watt's famous remark about "Jews, women and a cripple," Reagan's "joke" about bombing the Russians in five minutes, and Reagan's description of the now-clear majority of Americans who favor the nuclear freeze as "jackasses." The fate of the world cannot be left in the hands of these men who pretend to be grown-ups but who are, in fact, quite horribly, aging juveniles.

Campaign 'smear' tactics

Dear Editor:

Here in the beauty of the Monterey Peninsula one thing most of us find particularly shocking are the acts of vandals. I can still remember the outrage many of us felt when vandals cut down that fine old tree that everyone cherished by the Carmel High School.

I am writing to express the same kind of outrage many of us feel about recent vandalous political mailings trying to chop down Leon Panetta. Most peninsulans are aware of how very lucky we are to be served by someone known throughout the United States as one of the best legislators in the country.

Most peninsulans are also aware of how much Leon Panetta has done to preserve the quality of life we enjoy here on the peninsula. And we know how hard he works, not on behalf of greedy special interests, but on behalf of all of us. This is the man who is now running for Congress, not on empty promises but on an outstanding voting record that has consistently demonstrated his firm commitment to both social and fiscal responsibility.

Surely those who pay for these unwarranted attacks on Panetta should have better uses for their money than to pollute our mailboxes with expensive ads trying to smear one of the most principled, honest and upright public servants in the United States.

Vote for Mondale

Dear Editor:

An aspiring young Hollywood actor, studying with a famous drama coach, asked his teacher one day about the single most important thing to be learned about acting. "Honesty!" was the reply. "You must project honesty and sincerity. When you can fake that, you have it made."

Ronald Reagan has it made, and he is fooling too many people who believe and trust him. If voters understood Reagan's ideology and record, Reagan would never be re-elected.

As governor, Reagan said taxes should hurt, so people would know they were paying them. He should have added "but not hurt the rich," for that year through tax shelters Reagan paid no income tax on his own large income.

When campaigning for governor, Reagan opposed state income tax withholding; but as governor, approved it. The huge extra taxes which burdened Californians that year created the treasury surplus Reagan likes to boast about.

If re-elected, Reagan will continue to sock it to the poor and to the middle-class people. To cut the dangerously high budget deficit, which was caused by his large tax cuts for the rich and the big corporations and by his reckless 40-percent increase in military spending, Reagan most certainly will increase taxes, although he will disguise it as income tax "reform," revenue enhancement, value-added taxes or sales tax.

Protect yourself and our nation by electing Walter Mondale, a real and well-qualified leader who is both honest and fair.

They should resign

Dear Editor:

Carmel has lost the services of Bill Rand, a dedicated school superintendent who managed to build a marvelous educational team at CUSD over the past six years.

Rand will be missed, though not by the three recently elected or appointed school board members who made 1984 a chamber of horrors for him, his administrative associates and the fine faculty within the Carmel schools.

These same three board members — Robert Fenton, James Yates and Susan Bromfield — have their own agenda for change, regardless of the opposing views of other board members, administrative staffs, teachers and parents.

Carmel's teachers, for example, are without a new contract, incensed over the insulting 1 percent raise (salary and benefits) they've been offered. They haven't gone on strike, though few would blame them if they did. It seems they're as dedicated as was Rand.

Where's the money for Carmel's teachers? It's committed elsewhere, to programs like the new seventh period at Carmel Middle School. Somehow "programs" have become more meritorious than teacher compensation for the education of our children, and that's a failure of priorities.

Two weeks ago, at the CUSD board meeting, hundreds of concerened citizens let the same three board members know exactly how they have failed our community. Demands for their resignations received overwhelming support, and one board member — Yates — committed himself to resign if that's what the people want.

That is what the people want Fenton, Yates and Bromfield to do. And it must be done quickly, before other talented administrators and teachers choose to leave.

I empathize over the painful decision facing Fenton, Yates and Bromfield, each of whom may have joined the board with many fine intentions. Results, regretably, have been disastrous. The community is in turmoil, and good educators may be lost to Carmel. We can't tolerate such a sorry state of affairs. Immediate resignations are in order.

Power of the press

Dear Editor:

Ah, the power of the press! The offending newspaper vending machine is no longer chained to a city tree. Overnight it miraculously levitated itself uphill and became attached to a city parking sign.

The other boxes have stood their ground. Nine of them still infest Ocean Avenue like so many microwave ovens on stilts. The total now stands at 18, the rest rearing their ugly heads on Dolores, San Carlos, Fifth and Sixth.

Well, if they won't go voluntarily, perhaps property owners whose sidewalks they deface can take action. Maggie Hays could protest the trio at the entrance to Carmel Plaza, while the Mediterranean Market could try to oust the quartet at its door.

And what about the legality of chains attached to mail boxes, bus seats, litter boxes, parking signs and even the hallowed village bulletin board? Are we in such desperate need of USA Today that we must tolerate nine of their vending machines desecrating our sidewalks?

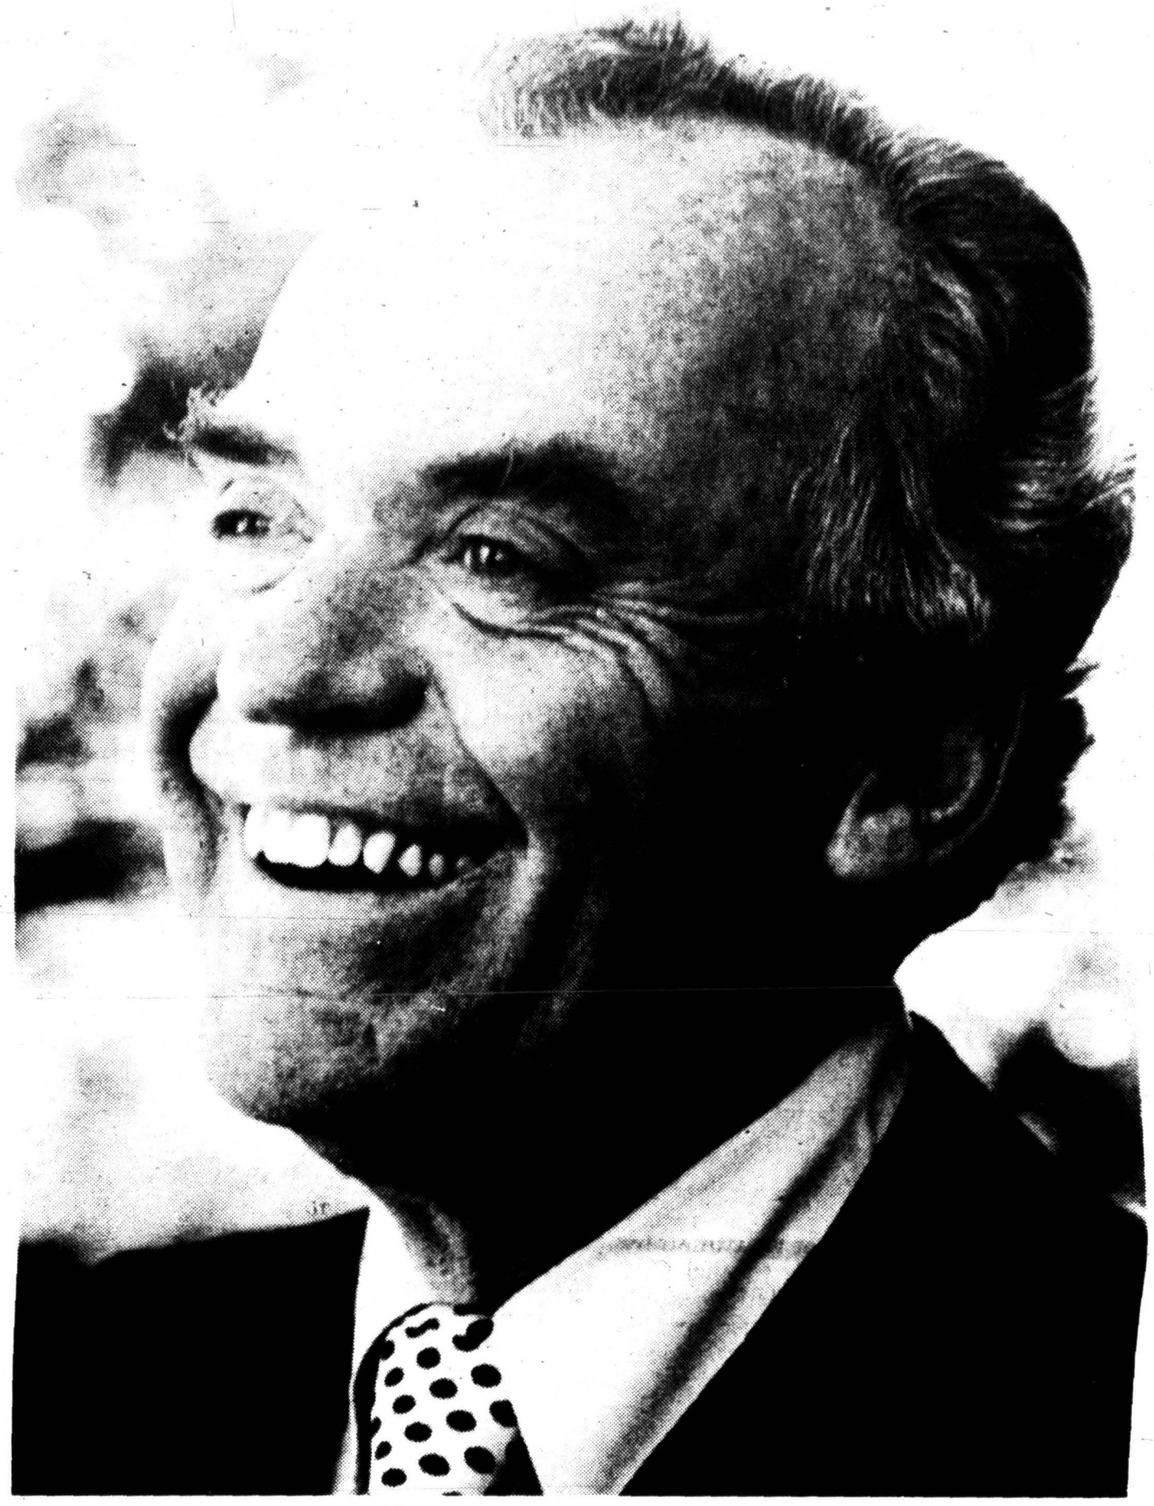
Candidates doff gloves in Fifth District contest

KARIN STRASSER Kauffman believes that her work throughout the Fifth District makes her qualified for a seat on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.



HOWARD BRUNN believes that his experience as an elected government official will be the deciding factor in the Nov. 6 election to choose a Fifth District representative

Strasser Kauffman predicts victory over Brunn Nov. 6

By MICHAEL GARDNER

DO FIFTH district voters want their supervisor to have a political background limited to four years on the Carmel City Council or do they prefer someone with a history of active involvement throughout Monterey County?

Karin Strasser Kauffman thinks voter preference will be the latter and that's why she confidently predicts a victory over ex-councilman Howard Brunn in the Nov. 6 election for Fifth District Monterey County supervisor.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman handily won the June 5 primary by a 6,181 to 4,413 margin over Brunn but faces a runoff because she did not get 50 percent or more of the votes cast for the five candidates. The unsuccessful other three candidates were Neill Gardner, Ed Lee and Dortha Roesler.

As the runner-up in the primary, Brunn seeks an upset and has made experience the focal point of his campaign. (See related story, this issue.)

But Mrs. Strasser Kauffman dismissed Brunn's claims that she is unqualified simply because she has never held an elected political office.

"The major distinction is we're talking about the post of county supervisor," Mrs. Strasser Kauffman told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Oct. 26.

"He says experience counts. It's his weakness and my strength," said the 42-year-old Mrs. Strasser Kauffman, a political science instructor on a leave of absence from Monterey Peninsula College.

"I've worked in the county for years. When we talk about experience, that supports me," she said.

She also chided Brunn for his alleged invisibility at the local level, where citizens work for change rather than merely talk about it before supervisors or at society gatherings.

For example, Carmel River Watch leads several walks along the river a year to talk about changes and protection measures.

"I have never seen Howard in the river. I have never seen him on a walk on the river," she said. When I talk about being involved, I mean physically involved — not just with titles. People need to look at experience on a day-to-day basis."

•

VOTERS NEED to realize the city of Carmel is an integral part of the Fifth District, but that a supervisor also must represent Carmel Valley, Big Sur, the residential areas around the city, and portions of Highway 68, Toro Park and Pebble Beach, Mrs. Strasser Kauffman said.

"The city of Carmel is very important to me, but the city is only one part of a very large district," she said.

"The county community is two-thirds of the population of the Fifth District. These people have nobody but the supervisors.

"When you talk about the county, we're talking about a whole different ballgame.

Brunn says his experience makes him best candidate

By MICHAEL GARDNER

HOWARD BRUNN paints himself as a seasoned politician and experienced businessman running against a rookie candidate who has never held an elected office.

And that, Brunn says, is the reason why area voters should elect him Nov. 6 to represent the Fifth District on the Monterey County Board of Supervisors.

The 61-year-old Carmel resident admittedly faces an uphill battle in his race against Karin Strasser Kauffman, who was the top vote-getter in the June 5 primary to select a replacement for outgoing Supervisor William Peters.

Brunn believes a strong campaign focusing on his experience as a Carmel City Council member and local businessman is the key to victory next Tuesday.

"The main thing we've stressed since we entered this campaign is that experience counts," Brunn told the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook two weeks before election day.

"This is the main thing where we differ. She has never held an elected political office."

"Look at the record. My opponent has never held elected office and appears to want to start right at the top. No on-the-job training with Howard."

Brunn's elected political experience he boasts of is his 1978-82 term on the Carmel City Council. In 1982 he chose not to run for reelection. In 1980 he ran unsuccessfully for mayor.

He also has served on various special interest citizens groups. He was a founding member of Carmel River Watch, which was established to help protect the river and steelhead trout. He quit when "it became too political."

Brunn has served on community boards, including the Tor House Foundation and the Carmel Foundation for senior citizens.

He also is a member of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, a 1,600-member group that meets regularly to address issues in the Valley and make recommendations to supervisors on a variety of proposals before the county.

Brunn hopes to overcome Strasser Kauffman's primary lead by picking up a majority of the votes that were scattered among the unsuccessful primary candidates: Ed Lee, Neill Gardner and Dortha Roesler.

Lee, a former Monterey Peninsula Water Management District director, received 2,811 votes. He was followed by Mrs. Roesler of Toro Park with 1,459 and newspaper editor Gardner with 868.

As the top two vote getters, Mrs. Strasser Kauffman with 6,181 votes and Brunn with 4,413, now face each other in a runoff, which is required when no candidate gets 50 percent of the votes cast.

Brunn is so confident of victory that in late August he sold his retail Carmel Mercantile Co. to devote full time to the campaign.

Voters to decide fate of hotel tax rate increase

A MEASURE that would raise about $500,000 to be split evenly between new economic development programs and cultural activities will go before voters Nov. 6.

Measure A will raise the 8 percent hotel tax to 10 percent. One percent of the money generated will be used for economic development programs, and the other 1 percent is to be earmarked for cultural activities.

Two-thirds of those voting must approve the measure. It would go into effect Jan. 1, 1985.

Supporters of the measure say that the increase would generate the funds necessary to "bring new businesses to the industrial parks located throughout the county as well as training for residents to fill the new jobs," according to their ballot statement.

Opponents of the measure argue that the tax may price some motels out of the market. For example, a $50 room becomes $55 with the tax.

Karin Strasser Kauffman for supervisor

FIVE MONTHS ago, on the eve of the June primary election, we took a hard look at the five candidates who ran in the Fifth District for Monterey County supervisor and concluded that Karin Strasser Kauffman was best suited to the task.

Since then, there's been a lot of campaign rhetoric under the typewriter, but nothing has caused a shift in this opinion. She's still the best person for the job.

At the time of the primary election, the differences between the two candidates whose names appear on the Nov. 6 ballot — Howard Brunn and Karin Strasser Kauffman — were less striking than they are now.

The biggest differences at that time seemed to be between the two who made it to the runoff and the other three candidates — Ed Lee, Neill Gardner, and Dortha Roessler. All three of the latter seemed markedly more pro-development and less conservationist.

So what's changed in five months to produce a sharper distinction between Brunn and Strasser Kauffman?

For one thing, former Carmel City Councilman Howard Brunn appears to have maneuvered his campaign subtly but perceptibly toward the pro-growth forces who voted last spring for Lee, Gardner or Roesler. His campaign advertisements have said Brunn wants to "get on with it," meaning forge ahead with a new Carmel River dam and build the Hatton Canyon Freeway.

At the same time, Brunn took a beating for his assertion (which he later ascribed to hasty copywriting) in a political advertisement that he had "stopped the supertankers from coming into Monterey Bay" and "saved the artichoke fields."

Brunn favors 2,000 units of development at Rancho San Carlos even before a specific plan or an environmental impact report for the project have been prepared, but opposes placement of more "dish" antennas at the COMSAT station in Cachagua, although the EIR for that expansion has not been completed or certified.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman, on the other hand, is opposed to any more than 500 units at Rancho San Carlos on the basis of limited environmental carrying capacity, and has withheld an opinion on the COMSAT project until a complete environmental impact report which deals specifically with issues of microwave radiation is released.

Both favor completion of a Carmel River dam and construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway.

Brunn has attempted to make much of the fact Mrs. Strasser Kauffman has never held elective office, as he did on the Carmel City Council. But she has been active at the county level for years — as a director of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and through school and environmental groups.

An important factor, too, is Mrs. Strasser Kauffman's ardent assertion that she will not use the position merely as a political springboard — as has been suggested by Brunn. She has stated clearly and unequivocally that she would like to serve two terms on the board of supervisors and then return to teaching.

Therefore, we recommend Mrs. Strasser Kauffman for supervisor in the Fifth District.

Carmel School Trustees RESPOND

Supporters of the Carmel Unified Schools have asked Trustees Robert Fenton, Susan Bromfield, and James Yates to respond to recent criticism, in order to provide the public with information concerning conditions within our District. They have provided the following statement:

"We welcome an opportunity to address publicly the confusion that has resulted from unfounded statements by some misinformed members of the community. We believe their behavior is divisive and deflects valuable time and energy away from the important task of improving our schools. It is our belief that, knowing the facts, the public will better understand the recent policies of the Board, and join with us in support of greater opportunities for students and, therefore, for teachers in Carmel schools.

NEW DIRECTION FOR DISCRETIONARY FUNDS

Carmel school enrollment has declined since Propostion 13 by approximately 1,000 students. Many of these students transferred to private schools. The current Board has been the first to invest "long term educational seed money" to reverse this disastrous enrollment trend. In the current school year enrollment jumped by 142 students over projections, providing an increase of more than $300,000 in state revenue for next year. (The method of receiving funds for the School District from the State generally has a one year lag under the law. The increased income may not help during this year's financial difficulty, but will be of benefit in the future.) This year we elected to use a portion of the discretionary funds available as seed money to invest in:

- K-3 grades' low class size
- 7th period at Middle School
- full funding for textbook and instructional supplies
- staff for High School Student Resource Center for career planning
- Peer Excellence program for the High School - an exemplary pilot project from the State Department of Education
- Project 2000 - long range planning seminar to be continued, looking toward students' needs in the year 2000
- Carmel High School's "new learning environment" - closed campus during the school day, stricter attendance policy, and revised Code of Conduct

NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE TEACHERS

The current negotiations with the teachers' union have a complex background:

- 85% of current budget is already devoted to staff salaries and benefits
- the average salary of the Carmel teacher is $26,800 plus approximately $5,600 in benefits for 180 contact days, including six days of sick leave
- Carmel District's source of income is penalized by a court decision (Serrano vs. Priest), which diverts our tax dollars to low wealth districts
- less than 2% of our budget is federal funding, while the average in the state is 6%; the difference is about $250,000 per year
- a portion of the revenue that comes to the District is restriced by statue to specific programs

Carmel teachers are being offered a 3.27% increase, larger than the increase of the last two years. This Board does not believe that 3.27% is enough for our fine professional staff, but we are constrained by the choice among current budget funding, student programs, employee salaries, and financial growth for the District. The major way to insure increased salary benefits is by increased enrollment in our District. We have turned the corner.

THE SUPERINTENDENT AND THE BOARD

It is the Board's duty to make policy, the Superintendent's duty to carry it out. If either one fails to perform, progress is interrupted. Private executive sessions — necessarily closed to the public — were under way with the Superintendent. One Board member, not one of us, breached the confidentiality required by law of these executive sessions. This disclosure preempted development of the options which the Board and Superintendent would have had if the law had been observed. Public uproar interrupted further discussion, possibly prompted resignation of the Superintendent, and prevented orderly resolution of the employee contracts.

WE DID WHAT WE SAID WE'D DO

During our campaigns for office we let the voters know that, if elected, we would give highest budget priority to the educational program of our children. This we have done, and now we are beginning to see benefits of this new direction. Many people deserve credit for helping turn the tide — a highly dedicated and professional faculty and staff, committed families, and a supportive community.

Now, in this time of decision, more than ever we need your continued support, so that we can continue the emphasis toward increased enrollment, fiscal stability, and genuine excellence in our schools."

Three trustees to fight recall move

THREE members of the Carmel Unified School District Board of Education who are targets of a recall campaign categorically deny the charges levied against them.

Board President Robert Fenton and Trustees James Yates and Susan Bromfield say they will battle the recall effort rather than quit.

Recall petitions are expected to be circulated beginning this week.

Following is Fenton's response to the recall committee charges:

"The eight listed grounds for proposed recall are nebulous and contain no facts, specific instances, or specific actions, but are only inuendo, false rumors, and conclusions without basis.

"Therefore, I must respond in a general manner by stating that all accusations are false. On what do you base your opinions? You have rarely attended meeting of the Carmel school board. Had you spent 12 or more months of intensive observation of the Carmel Unified School District, as have board members, then you would know that your accusations are untrue. I ask, 'How, when, in what way, and based upon what data do you reach your conclusions?'

"I suggest that anyone approached to sign a recall petition ask these same questions.

"The disruptive consequences to which you allude are caused by the vindictive faction you purport to represent, and not those board members whose recall you seek. Further, should a recall election take place, the cost of that election, and the consequences resulting therefrom, will be your direct responsibility. I am not a threat to education. I have done my job and my conscience is clear."

Yates and Mrs. Bromfield also provided the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook with unofficial responses to each of the eight charges against them.

Charges made by the recall committee are that the three trustees:

1) "Inappropriately assumed responsibilities of administration;

2) "Neglected [their] role as an educational policymaker;

3) "Failed to seek the input of professional staff, faculty, and parent groups prior to making major decisions;

4) "Acted as ... individual[s], not as part of a deliberative body;

5) "By the foregoing actions, provided needless confrontations with the administration, faculty and the public in which [they] have appeared rude, uncommunicative and secretive;

6) "By the foregoing actions, provoked the resignation of an esteemed superintendent of schools;

7) "By the foregoing actions, prompted highly qualified professional administrators, and faculty to consider seeking employment elsewhere;

8) "By the foregoing actions, produced destructive consequences and unacceptable risks to education within our district."

Mrs. Bromfield's response to each charge is:

1) "Absolutely false! As clerk of the governing board of the Carmel Unified School District, I was required to sign my name as a district signature — once because all three employees who were duly authorized to sign were on vacation and out of the district. Poor management and poor planning and board had no prior notice of their absence.

2) "Absolutely false! In the superintendent's job description it specifically states that it is his job to review, revise and update board policies and procedures. This was totally ignored for four years — this appears as a recommendation in the 1982 ACSA-CSBA Team Management (prior board). In 1984, this has still not been done.

3) "False! What specifically? The closed campus? Asked by prior board in November, 1983 to study — an unsatisfactory report is on file. In Feb. 14, 1984 minutes a motion reads that administration is to involve parents, staff and students to bring back and plan in April, 1984.

4) "As a board member, I attended many CUSD functions. I visited all the schools, supported all fund raisings — that is part of the trustee's job. No "act" took place.

5) "False! I have never behaved rudely to anyone as an elected official of this district. Appeared to whom? Secretively — my life is an open book. I have had regular communication with public and employees all year and office hours were regularly held.

6) "False. Superintendent said he was planning a career change for the past two or three years. I accepted his resignation as I did all other employees.

7) "Where are the facts? All administrators and faculty and staff are in place. Sounds like more rumors.

8) "All allegations are totally false."

And Yates responded to each charge:

1) "To the contrary, being a school board member is only a part-time job. You assume the responsibility to set general policy for the district. The only time a school board edges into any other role is if we are given no choice because of a lack of execution on agreed-upon policy. This is only done as a last resort for the good of the district as per our responsibilities.

2) "Educational policymaker has the responsibility to look ahead to help anticipate opportunities both financially and educationally. I have initiated or taken a lead role in the following:

• Peer Excellence Program for the Carmel High School.

• Project 2000 — look to the future in the year 2000 and determine where we need to direct our energies.

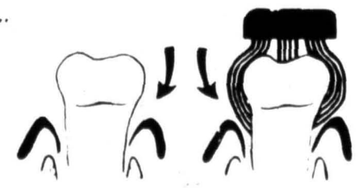
New Brushing Concept

The Curved Bristle
IT CLEANS YOUR TEETH EFFECTIVELY NO MATTER HOW YOU BRUSH

"CURVED BRISTLES MAKE SENSE"
Because the bristles are bent to reach the sulcus. The sulcus is the space between the teeth and the gum where the bacteria grow, cause caries and bad breath. The outer bristles are curved and soft to protect and clean the gums. The center bristle is short and stiff to clean the top of the teeth.



SPIRULINA: THE FOOD OF THE FUTURE IS HERE NOW.
Spirulina Plankton is the most basic substance in the whole food chain... Spirulina's high-quality protein contains 18 of 22 amino acids required for health — and all eight essential amino acids in the correct proportion. Protein such as this is rarely found in non-animal sources, so Spirulina is popular with vegetarians. And Spirulina's protein, which provides sustaining energy to the human body, is up to 95 percent, digestible as compared with beef's 20 percent. Several kinds of unusual proteins called biliproteins which occur naturally in our own bodies are found in Spirulina. Spirulina is low in calories, fats and sodium and amazingly high in efficient proteins (containing 60 to 71 percent) and all the cell salts and enzymes for body metabolism.

• Creation of a new learning environment through the closure of the high school campus. This action had positive results and reduced peer pressure for drug and alcohol usage.

• Discovered that the district's financial resources were severely compromised by the failure to sell or list surplus real estate.

3) "This board moved board meetings into each school location to better communicate with the public. I have talked and consulted with staff people in each school numerous times on various issues. This board also added a day for public hearing prior to the adoption of the last budget. The board cannot be held accountable for people not attending public meetings.

4) "An individual board member to become familiar with his responsibilities has to spend time in the district individually. This also entails individual meetings with administration to express opinion and learn better each other's needs and objectives. The substance of those conversations are private. If a board member goes public with such conversation the law may be violated.

5) "Communication style is a two-way street. I can only communicate intelligently about what I know. When this board approached the politic'' sensitive issues, it sometimes was met with minimal cooperation. The public interest was not being served by the board "walking away" from the issue, but rather aggressively pursuing it to some resolution.

6) "The superintendent has been counseled by this board many times about the ability to directly communicate to the board and exercise the leadership that is required for that position. This generally did not happen. For example, in the following areas of:

- Divestiture of real estate
- Evaluation process of administration
- Surprising last-minute opposition to seventh period day for Carmel Middle School prior to board vote.

7) "The employees can only speak for themselves about their own personal needs. I have recently met with all of the administration and gave them an opportunity to express their concerns and ask questions. I came away from the meeting and other subsequent conversations believing that we all are focused on the positive direction of the school district.

8) "The consequences and risks to the district were caused by a member of the CUSD school board going public with a confidential personnel matter. When this happened, all options were dramatically reduced for all concerned. If this had not happened, the concerns would not be there in the forefront."

JIM YATES believes this board has taken positive steps to better schools.

"ALL ALLEGATIONS are totally false," is Trustee Susan Bromfield's response.

Trustees to study what schools will teach in 2,000

'WE'RE GOING to have to be more future-oriented or be left behind."

That's how interim Supt. Rich Hawkins sums up the importance of Project 2000, a futuristic report that proposes to revolutionize the fundamental premises of education in the Carmel Unified School District.

The board of education will take an in-depth look at how and what the schools will teach in the year 2000 when it meets in a special study session Nov. 5.

Trustees will start the probe at 4 p.m. and continue until 6 p.m. After an hour-long dinner break, the board will reconvene from 7 to 9 p.m. The session, which is open to the public, will be in the Carmel High School cafeteria.

Hawkins is in charge of Project 2000, an ambitious long-range think tank that worked over the summer to prepare a comprehensive plan for the future of Carmel schools.

The premise behind Project 2000 is that society is changing so rapidly that schools had better plan decades in advance rather than merely for the next school year.

"Traditionally our mission has been for students to fit into a predetermined society," Hawkins told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook. "But society today is much more changeable and is not predetermined."

Jobs are a perfect example, he explained.

Traditionally, schools have used the job market of the day and past two decades as a benchmark for skills to be taught.

But all that has changed because society keeps evolving faster than schools realize.

"Some of the jobs the parents are doing today are not even going to exist in the year 2000," Hawkins said.

And in the past, schools were not designed to shape society but just to be part of it. Today, education must teach future leaders their role in a world that is quickly shrinking because of the high-tech communications industry.

The "mission" of the schools has to be redefined to meet the changing job market and shrinking world.

And schools also need to define important international issues that perhaps students should know more about and understand how to solve, Hawkins said.

Based on this information, the committee recommends that the district trustees reexamine the mission of the schools, how classes are taught, the role of a teacher.

choice between the two of us, is definitely going my way," he said.

•

THE STAPLE of the campaign diet this fall has been land use issues that center on Rancho San Carlos, the proposed Carmel River Dam, Spanish Bay, and Hatton Canyon Freeway.

Other focal points of the campaign have been housing, COMSAT expansion, Mission Ranch, the Odello property, and pay raises for supervisors.

The most glaring difference between Brunn and Kauffman is their disagreement over the Rancho San Carlos project. But they do agree on some other issues.

For example, they both agree that the Hatton Canyon Freeway should be constructed, a dam is needed on the Carmel River and developers should be required to build low- and moderate-cost housing in the Valley rather than meet the inclusionary housing law by constructing those units in Salinas or King City.

It is the finer points of these issues that they argue about. For example, Brunn thinks a majority of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors is purposely trying to block the dam.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman claims the board is actively working to place the question before voters.

Brunn thinks the Spanish Bay resort — a 270-unit hotel, 80 condominium units and golf course in Pebble Beach — is a foregone conclusion. Mrs. Strasser Kauffman says there still is time to fight it.

And, as in any campaign where land use and development are the overriding themes, someone always is charged with being a friend of the developers.

This election is no exception.

Brunn has come under increasing attack by Strasser Kauffman supporters, who say he has altered his stand on sensitive land use issues so that he can attract the ballots of those who voted for the more pro-development primary candidates — Gardner, Roesler and Lee.

"He appears to be more pro-development now," Mrs. Strasser Kauffman has said.

Brunn dismisses the charge as political hogwash.

To defend himself, Brunn points to his statement on the ballot that lists his position on a variety of topics.

"My opponent takes no stands on any issues in her statement. I take specific stands on specific issues," Brunn countered.

"These positions were not taken for political expediency. My ballot statement was written shortly after the primary in June," he responded.

"Howard Brunn is the same candidate he was six months ago and will be the same supervisor six months from now."

The proposed 3,800-unit Rancho San Carlos project has generated the most disagreement between the two candidates.

•

MRS. STRASSER Kauffman has lobbied for zoning in the proposed Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan that would allow only 500 units on the approximately 20,000-acre ranch in the hills south of Carmel Valley Road.

Brunn contends that the proposed area plan should designate zoning for Rancho San Carlos to allow up to 2,000 units.

The area plan is still to be adopted by supervisors. County planners have recommended language that would allow up to 2,000 units on the Rancho San Carlos property.

"My position on Rancho San Carlos is simply this: I don't believe Mr. Oppenheimer or any other person who owns property in Monterey County or anywhere should be essentially told by any interest group — prior to having an opportunity to present a land use plan — that they will be limited to 500 units on 20,000 acres," Brunn said.

Brunn said the restrictive zoning would be tantamount to "confiscation without due process of this individual's property."

Other issues and Brunn's position include:

• Housing: Brunn wants to see more cooperative ventures between the county and private interests to develop additional low- and moderate-cost housing in the area.

"I think the inclusionary housing ordinance (requiring developers to sell or rent 15 percent of the new units to low- and moderate-income tenants) is a good one," Brunn said.

"I think the developers ought to be obligated to put the housing on site (and) more often the developer should be required to build the housing."

Brunn says too often developers build expensive homes in exclusive areas such as Carmel Valley and then provide the low-cost housing in Salinas or King City.

And he opposes any "in lieu" fees that would allow a developer to pay the county instead of building low- and moderate-cost housing.

"The housing should be a reality for the people of the county rather than a number in a bank account," Brunn believes.

• COMSAT: Brunn is opposed to the expansion of the Jamesburg Earth Station proposed by Communications Satellite Corp. (COMSAT).

"Over 15 years ago when I first viewed the 95-foot-high COMSAT dish I felt it was a most inappropriate facility in the beautiful Cachagua Valley. I stand firmly against the expansion of that facility."

• Carmel River Dam: Brunn remains supportive of an 18,000-ac.-ft. reservoir.

•

BUT HE insists that water district Directors Pat Bernardi, Dick Heuer and John Williams will purposely prepare a financing scheme that never will be approved by voters.

Brunn wants to see a financing plan that would pay for the dam through a combination of increased connection fees and higher water bills.

• Two percent motel tax increase: Brunn is in favor of the increase in the motel tax from 8 to 10 percent.

One percent of the additional revenue is to be earmarked for economic development and another 1 percent would be allocated for cultural activities in the county.

• Odello development: "I'm quite comfortable with the 162 units proposed by the Odello family," Brunn said. "The Odellos have paid their dues and should be allowed to get on with it."

The Odellos want to build the housing units on their artichoke fields on the east side of Highway 1 just south of Carmel River.

The development has been stalled by a city of Carmel lawsuit that claims the project would have an adverse impact on water supply, sewage capacity and traffic.

• Mission Ranch: Brunn agrees with the city of Carmel that the site should not have been rezoned for residential use until after an environmental impact report is prepared.

Superior Court Judge Maurice Jourdane Oct. 24 heard arguments in the city suit that seeks to delay rezoning until after an EIR is certified.

• Spanish Bay: Brunn does not see how he can stop the hotel, condominium and golf course complex proposed for Spanish Bay in Pebble Beach.

"By the time I take office, ground probably would have been broken."

Brunn did say that if he could exercise control over the project, he would require an alternative to large trucks hauling sand on Congress Road.

Brunn also expressed concern that the 270-unit hotel exceeds the county height requirement.

The candidate promised that residents of Pebble Beach would be represented by him.

"It's not the same company that it was when Samuel Morse was alive," Brunn said. I will represent the interests of the people."

• Pay raises: Brunn believes that a judicial committee should determine pay raises for supervisors. He is opposed to elected officials voting themselves salary hikes.

He also promised to return a portion of his salary if he finds that being supervisor is not a full-time job.

• Prop. 36: Brunn opposes the measure that would further cut property taxes and deplete revenues for state, local and school governments.

Strasser Kauffman predicts victory

And Mrs. Strasser Kauffman questions why four of the five Carmel City Council members — Mayor Charlotte Townsend and members James Wright, Helen Arnold and Robert Stephenson — have publicly endorsed her candidacy if Brunn's experience on the council is so important.

Because of the diversity in the Fifth District, Mrs. Strasser Kauffman believes her county-wide experience makes her far more qualified for supervisor than Brunn's elected four years as a member of the Carmel City Council.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman's campaign literature touts her work as a director of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA), a 1,600-member group that regularly addresses issues of the day and makes recommendations to supervisors.

She also is a director of the Monterey County Alliance on Aging and Carmel River Watch, a group dedicated to preservation of the river.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman also is active in the schools. She is president of the Tularcitos School Site Council and has been active in faculty groups at Monterey Peninsula College.

The pivotal issue of this 1984 supervisorial campaign has been land use.

On that theme, Mrs. Strasser Kauffman criticized Brunn for allegedly altering his stand on several issues in an effort to appear more pro-development. That is a tactic, she says, to attract supporters of the failed primary candidates Roesler, Gardner and Lee, all of whom were seen as more pro-development than Mrs. Strasser Kauffman.

A supervisor must listen to all groups and make responsible, unhurried decisions, Mrs. Strasser Kauffman believes.

"I just don't jump into things because it sounds good. The Fifth District needs somebody who will make their mind up in a rational, careful way and will listen to diverse interest groups," she said.

•

THE TWO candidates do agree on some issues.

Both support construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway, development of another dam on the Carmel River, and the need to enforce the county inclusionary housing ordinance so developers must build low and moderate cost housing on site rather than in elsewhere in the county.

The most obvious land use disagreement is over density for the proposed project on Rancho San Carlos, a 20,000-acre property in the hills south of Carmel Valley Road.

Brunn supports current wording in the draft Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan that would allow developers up to 2,000 units.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman wants the development limited to just 500 units because of its potentially "devastating" impact on traffic, water supply, air quality and sewage capacity of the Carmel Valley area.

Rancho San Carlos would provide "luxury retirement" homes for newcomers rather than affordable housing and jobs for local residents, she said.

"I have hopes the Oppenheimer Family (which owns the property) will meet with the county and talk to us some more from scratch," she said.

Other issues and Mrs. Strasser Kauffman's positions include:

• Housing: She and Brunn agree that supervisors must require developers to build low and moderate cost homes on site as part of their expensive projects.

Current practice, they claim, is to allow developers to build at will in the Valley area and then construct the affordable homes in Salinas, Prunedale or King City.

• Carmel River dam: Both candidates say a new dam is necessary for current residents and even minimal growth. And they agree the construction price should be paid by a combination of increased water connection fees and higher rates.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman adds that a dam can help restore the banks and environment along the river because the reservoir will allow the river to run year-round.

But Mrs. Strasser Kauffman vehemently disagrees with Brunn's allegations that some members of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District Board of Directors purposely want to design a financing scheme that would be rejected by voters.

Directors are moving ahead with the dam and will present a fair financing plan for voter approval, she said.

•

"I'M DETERMINED to work with the water board and moving ahead with the dam. I'm committed to a dam," she said.

• COMSAT: Mrs. Strasser Kauffman has not made a decision on the proposed expanion of the Communications Satellite Corp. (COMSAT) Jamesburg Earth Station.

"It is a very complicated issue. It's not a simple project," she said. "The longer you look at it, the more difficult a decision is."

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman apparently plans to decide after the final environmental impact report and project plans are submitted.

The reason for her reluctance lies in the fact that Mrs. Strasser Kauffman believes that COMSAT is a "good neighbor" and a non-polluting, job-providing industry the area needs.

She is worried about the visual impact, but thinks some kind of compromise could be formulated to screen the dish from view.

"I haven't seen enough to convince me that it can't be handled," Mrs. Strasser Kauffman said.

• Spanish Bay: Unlike Brunn, she thinks development of the hotel, golf course and condominium complex in Pebble Beach is not a foregone conclusion.

"The Forest community is seriously divided and I share their concerns. I'm hopeful we can still do something about it," Mrs. Strasser Kauffman said.

She especially is concerned about the "longe-range" effects the project will have in the area, including the traffic impact on Highway 68 and water supply.

"I think we can put pressure on them (Pebble Beach Co. officials) to make adjustments and work with the community. They're not unreasonable people."

• Two percent motel tax: Both candidates support an increase in the motel tax that would be split between economic development programs and cultural activities.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman proposes that half of the 1 percent for economic programs be allocated for the tourist-serving industry.

• Odello property: Mrs. Strasser Kauffman promises to negotiate with the Odello family and city of Carmel for a compromise over the proposed 162-unit residential development on the east side of Highway 1 about a mile south of Rio Road.

The city has filed a lawsuit to block the development, which it claims would adversely impact traffic, water supply and sewage capacity.

•

"I'M COMMITTED to resolving land use issues like this without long and costly lawsuits," she said.

• Pay raises: Mrs. Strasser Kauffman opposes supervisors being allowed to establish their own salaries. And she does not like the idea of tieing raises to the salaries of municipal court judges, which is the process approved by the current board.

• Prop. 36: Mrs. Strasser Kauffman said the proposition would have a "devastating" impact on county services.

She pointed out that it would severely restrict the ability of the county to keep and form new special districts to finance essential services, such as fire protection or lighting in rural areas.

• Future plans: Mrs. Strasser Kauffman discounts claims by Brunn supporters that she wants to use the post as a stepping stone to higher political offices.

"I think that's a legitimate question in light of may age and energy. I'm greatly flattered. It's simply not appealing to me. I want to serve on the county level," she said.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman believes that she can better help the community by serving in local government. And she wants to stay near her family.

"I'm a family woman. I don't want to split up my life. I want to live here with my family."

Campaign statement of Strasser Kauffman

By KARIN STRASSER KAUFFMAN

I OFFER extensive experience at the county level. I already know the county programs, problems and personnel.

The former chief executive officer of Monterey County, Richard Andrews, describes me as "better qualified than any other supervisor candidate I can remember." By contrast, my opponent has never served on a single county committee or commission.

In addition to experience and good judgment, my greatest strength is in motivating people, and in moving people of diverse views to work together toward a common goal. I work hard to understand all sides of an issue.

I also work hard to resolve conflict through discussion and cooperation, rather than by lawsuits. We must get away from the lawsuit mentality that has plagued relations between the county and the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

I want to make county government more responsive to the people it serves. We cannot afford hasty judgments on complicated issues. My decision-making style is a careful, thoughtful process with maximum possible citizen participation. We need this to restore confidence and trust in our county government.

The most important challenge for our Fifth District is to control development to protect our unique environment and quality of life. The master plans are a good start on a realistic approach to managing anticipated growth. I have been actively involved in developing and reviewing these plans. Now, the plans must be implemented and upheld; they should not become simply a starting point for further compromises.

Growth should be controlled through the planning process, not by limiting essential services. We do need a new Carmel River dam for drought protection and to protect and restore our river environment. The Hatton Canyon Freeway is, unfortunately, necessary to eliminate an unsafe and intolerable traffic bottleneck.

My interest and experience is not limited to land use issues. I am also dedicated to more energetic and imaginative efforts to provide services for our elderly, affordable housing, jobs for our young people and recreation for our children.

Having attended every county budget hearing for the past two years, I am well aware of the financial limitations on our county programs. I am equally aware, however, of the need and opportunities for better budget management. I have organized and led public workshops to evaluate our county budget process.

I'm proud to be endorsed by people and organizations representing so many diverse elements of our community. The mayors of Carmel and Monterey and a majority of the city council members in each city support my candidacy.

So do public safety organizations such as the Deputy Sheriff's Association and Carmel Safety (police and fire) Employees Association; environmental groups like Carmel River Watch, The Forest Committee and Sierra Club; Carmel Board of Realtors and leaders of three other business associations; Monterey Labor Council and other labor groups; three newspapers — Carmel Pine Cone, Salinas Californian and Seaside Post; and our Monterey County Employees Association.

This community consensus is truly gratifying. With your vote on Nov. 6, we can make a difference for our district.

Campaign statement of Howard Brunn

By HOWARD BRUNN

I HAVE lived in this area — Carmel, Carmel Valley and New Monterey — for more than 50 years. I attended Carmel High School (I was president of the student body), worked in a cannery in Monterey prior to World War II, have been a successful businessman, served my country flying 70 combat missions as pilot in command at the age of 21 and earned the Distinguished Flying Cross and other awards and decorations.

Our children are grown, educated and self-supporting. Recently I sold my retail business and am now a full-time campaigner. I want to be your full-time supervisor. I seek no higher public office and pledge not to use the office of supervisor as a stepping stone to Sacramento.

I don't want our Monterey County to be subjected to the kind of petty in-fighting that often exists among some of my opponent's supporters on the Carmel City Council. This is one of the reasons I chose not to run again for the Carmel council when my term was up.

In addition to a long and successful business management career, I have been involved in Monterey Peninsula public service for over a quarter century, long before my opponent arrived here.

I was president of the Carmel Business Association; vice president of the Tor House Foundation; owner of the Carmel Mercantile Co., as well as Mark Fenwick Corp. and other successful retail businesses. I'm a member of the Monterey Peninsula Foundation, History and Art Association, Carmel Foundation, Carmel Heritage, board member of the Monterey Jazz Festival, Talbott Corp., Paula Skene Designs...and much more.

I would hold some supervisors' meetings here on the peninsula instead of always in Salinas; I'll be accessible and available as I'm a resident-oriented person and candidate. I'll continue to represent your interests in housing, water resources, land use planning, traffic, employment and protection of the environment. I am not a no-growth mentality

Please study your Monterey County sample ballot, compare the records and see who is willing to take positions on issues.

Over and over my opponent says: "Listening to you..." on the ballot statement. I take specific stands on specific issues: Carmel River, the dam, Hatton Canyon Freeway, agricultural land, growth and preservation. I spell it out. No surprises. No on-the-job training. I have more city and county background and experience.

I enjoy public service. I believe I do it well. Your vote is both needed and appreciated. Experience counts. Let's get on with it!

Clarification

A story in the Oct. 18 edition of the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook mistakenly attributed a statement to Fifth District Supervisorial candidate Howard Brunn when it actually was said by his opponent, Karin Strasser Kauffman.

It was Mrs. Strasser Kauffman who suggested that the visitor-serving industry receive a guaranteed portion of the 2 percent increase in the hotel tax hike proposed by Measure A on the Nov. 6 ballot.

Of the 1 percent earmarked for economic development, one-half should be given to local chambers of commerce to benefit the tourist industry, according to Mrs. Strasser Kauffman.

The other 1 percent would raise funds for cultural activities.

It pays to advertise in the Pine Cone

Point Lobos hotel scheme is dropped

AN ATTEMPT by Supervisor William Peters to alter zoning law to allow commercial development on a hillside overlooking Point Lobos has failed.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors — including Peters — unanimously reached a consensus Oct. 23 to kill a proposed amendment to the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program that would have allowed a restaurant, conference center and some motel units on Michael's Hill, which is part of Huckleberry Ridge on Point Lobos Ranch.

Developers now are expected to return to their original plan to build two 120-unit hotels, a 500-seat convention center, restaurant and 42 homes on the 1,600-acre property just across the street from Point Lobos Ranch Reserve.

The residential units still would be allowed on Huckleberry Ridge.

Architect Paul Davis of Monterey already had prepared that proposal for submission to the Monterey County Planning Commission. Language to allow that proposal already has been incorporated in the Carmel Area Local Coastal Program.

However, in July Peters proposed to amend the LCP so the developers could apply for a convention center, small hotel and restaurant on Michael's Hill.

At that time, aide Steve Slade said Peters wanted to ensure the best use of the land.

"The architect has to be free to design the project that best fits the property. His (Peters') concern is that the architect not have his hands tied."

After Peters' proposal was rejected by supervisors Oct. 23, Slade said there was a "real misunderstanding" about what Peters wanted to do.

Slade claimed that the issue has been "blown out of proportion" and that Peters' recommendation to amend the LCP was unjustly surrounded by "confusion, rhetoric and emotion."

Peters merely wanted to give the developer an opportunity to submit plans for commercial development on Michael's Hill. He did not want to grant the project carte blanche approval, Slade said.

Supervisor Marc Del Piero of Salinas said that he, and Supervisors Barbara Shipnuck and Dusan Petrovic visited the prior to a vote.

"All of us independently determined that the project would not be compromised" by not allowing commercial development on the hill, Del Piero explained.

The supervisor also added that he believes the "peace and privacy" of the neighboring Carmelite Monastery would be "compromised" by commercial development on Michael's Hill.

The Point Lobos Ranch project is to be developed under a cooperative agreement between four different groups with interests in the property: the Headlands Corp., which includes members of the Hudson Family; Jose-Gibson Ltd., a limited partnership headed by Ted Richter and based in Monterey; Rancho San Jose Associates, also of Monterey; and Bud and Mary Whisler.

Free CPR course scheduled

A free course in cardiopulmonary resuscitation will be offered from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 5, in the Marina Council Chambers.

Instructors are registered nurses or respiratory therapists employed by Community Hospital and Monterey Peninsula Hospital. Successful graduates will receive official CPR certification, which requires class attendance and completion of a written exam and skills test.

Pre-registration is required. Call 625-4505.

Audubon Society plans field trip

The Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society will sponsor a field trip for bird study in the Salinas River Wildlife Area. Participants should meet at 8:30 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 4, at the K-Mart parking lot in Seaside or 9 a.m. at the wildlife area parking lot. For more information, call 373-2019.

An exquisite collection in 13 showrooms in Carmel and a new structure (10,000 sq. ft.) 10 min. from Carmel. Luciano has just returned from a two month world tour. An incredible source. Open Daily and Sunday.

City planners recommend temporary signs

THE CARMEL Planning Commission has recommended the city approve temporary signs for blood drives and "no parking" signs on private property.

The recommendation in the form of an ordinance must be adopted by the city council to become effective.

The ordinance would allow the American Red Cross to place temporary blood drive informational signs on city property. It is now illegal to install temporary signs on city property.

Commissioners also agreed that residents should be allowed to place small "no parking" signs on their private property.

In other action at their rather routine Sept. 19 session, planners:

• Approved a landscape design for Clyde Sturges' motel on the east side of San Carlos Street between Fifth and Fourth avenues.

• Adopted a negative declaration that means the city will not have to prepare an environmental impact report for its water storage tank to be installed near the beach at the foot of Ocean Avenue.

• Approved a city application to paint the police and public works buildings an "off-white" with beige trim.

PINE KNOTS

BY ALBERT EISNER — EDITOR EMERITUS

I'm voting for Strasser Kauffman

I'M GOING to vote for Karin Strasser Kauffman next Tuesday for supervisor to the Fifth District.

Although I have known her opponent Howard Brunn for many years, and regard him as a worthy candidate, I feel safer in casting my vote for Karin because I know she can be counted on when the chips are down on important questions of growth and land use.

Howard, who has good conservationist instincts, has waffled on some important issues, probably to attract the votes cast in last June's primary for the other three growth-oriented candidates. And, he has a tendency to change his mind without explaining why he switched positions.

In the Oct. 18 Pine Cone/Outlook, former Carmel Mayor Gunnar Norberg, an old friend and political ally of Brunn, urged readers to vote for Brunn because he had changed his position on the controversial Hatton Canyon Freeway.

Setting aside Gunnar's tortured logic for the moment, the fact remains that Howard, as a member of the Carmel City Council, voted with the council majority in opposition to the freeway. He now supports construction of the freeway.

Norberg thinks that since Howard switched once, he may switch again, and oppose the freeway once again after he is elected. I wonder if Brunn appreciated that kind of "endorsement."

I served with Karin as a member of the board of directors of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association and can say without fear of contradiction that she does her homework, says what she means and is consistent in her convictions. I regret that I cannot say the same for Brunn.

I observed Howard closely and commented on his actions when he was a member of the Carmel City Council in the late 1970s. He prides himself on being a "quick study"...that is, his ability to skim a sheaf of papers and make up his mind quickly. During the decision-making process that followed, this hasty study sometimes had unfortunate results.

His propensity for changing his mind is all too well known. He was one of the members of the Carmel City Council that voted in a late-night session to purchase the Piccadilly Park property on Dolores Street when the advertised agenda for the meeting was to set a date for an election so that the people could decide whether to buy the property. The still-empty lot stands forlornly years later as a monument to the hasty decision.

Howard relies too heavily on staff to run things. When controversy erupted in the spring of 1979 over the pressure to remove City Administrator Jack Collins, Brunn stated: "I wouldn't have run for city councilman if we didn't have a strong city administrator."

He has repeatedly stated that he views an elected official as a member of the board of directors of a business that sets policy and lets its staff run the company.

HE REFUSED to take a position on the proposal put forward by outgoing Supervisor Bill Peters that would amend the just-adopted Land Use Plan for the Carmel area and allow construction of a conference center, hotel and housing at Huckleberry Hill opposite Point Lobos. Mrs. Strasser Kauffman strongly opposed the proposal, which fortunately was killed by the board of supervisors this week

When asked about the development proposals for the 22,000-acre San Carlos Ranch, he first said he could not take a position until he had studied the environmental impact report. He now supports construction of 2,000 units on the property south of Carmel Valley.

Mrs. Strasser Kauffman favors limiting the project to 500 units, which was the density recommended by the Citizens Advisory Committee, the League Women Voters and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

Howard believes the directors of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District are vacillating and really don't want to build a dam on the Carmel River. Mrs. Strasser Kauffman supports the efforts of the board and says "there is no reason to be suspicious of their commitment to build a dam." She adds that the dam should be paid for by both the present users and any new beneficiaries of the water supply it would generate.

Howard believes the huge development proposed for Spanish Bay in Pebble Beach is a foregone conclusion. Mrs. Strasser Kauffman thinks the board of supervisors can have a significant impact on the size and scope of the development.

I could go on, but I think you get the point. Howard has genuine conservationist credentials. He did play a role in the titanic Odello artichoke ranch battle. He did assist in the fight to keep supertankers out of Moss Landing.

He was part of the battle to get a strong Carmel Valley Master Plan. It is unfortunate that he chose to make extravagant claims about just how important a role he played in these matters, and it hurt his campaign.

But, because he has become opportunistic in his quest for the votes of those people who voted for Ed Lee and Neill Gardner in the primary, he has shown a disquieting ability to shift his ground. In short, he's unpredictable.

That is probably why the voters of Carmel rebuffed him when he ran a forceful campaign for mayor of Carmel in 1980.

Considering the importance of the issues that are scheduled to come before the board of supervisors in the coming year, I feel confident that Karin Strasser Kauffman can be relied upon to represent the best interests of the people of the Fifth District forcefully and consistently on the board of supervisors.

Carmel City Council will discuss water waste

CARMEL CITY Councilman David Maradei — upset over alleged water waste and inaction by the California-American Water Co. — wants the state Public Utilities Commission to step in.

Maradei has proposed that the council write a strongly-worded letter to the PUC that would outline city complaints about Cal-Am, the private corporation which provides water to Carmel and the Monterey Peninsula.

His request is to be considered by the council when it meets at 4 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 6 at city hall.

The focus of Maradei's complaint is that water pipe breaks have wasted "unbelievable" amounts of water because Cal-Am does not fix the problems immediately.

This especially irks Maradei because Carmel faces a potential Monterey Peninsula Water Management District-ordered moratorium on new water connection fees if the city uses more than its allocation of 1,031 acre feet of water.

The city currently has used 98 percent of its available water. City Planner Brian Roseth has under study possible conservation measures to keep the city within its allocation. (There are 325,851 gallons in an acre foot.)

While Carmel is under pressure to save water, Cal-Am wastes the resource by acting slowly on water pipe breaks, Maradei said.

The councilman thinks the Public Utilities Commission could "bring some informal pressure to bear" on Cal-Am to fix the breaks more quickly.

And Maradei wants the state agency to require Cal-Am to include repairs and replacement of city water mains in its budget.

"If our main water system is damaged we want to be sure they (Cal-Am officals) have money in the budget to repair the lines," Maradei told the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook Oct. 29.

"To the best of my knowledge, they do not have the money to replace the lines. What will it be like five years from now?"

Maradei's request that the city petition the PUC comes on the heels of a letter City Administrator Doug Schmitz wrote to Cal-Am in August that details slow responses to breaks in water pipes.

"On at least four occasions I have observed Cal-Am barricades identifying locations where a break has occured," Schmitz wrote.

•

'FOR WHATEVER reasons, immediate attention was not given to these breaks and considerable amounts of water, a resource of great concern to the populace of the peninsula due to its limited availability, (are) permitted to run into the storm system."

Cal Am Vice President and General Manager Larry Foy responded that there has been an unusual number of water pipe leaks because of the dry weather.

Foy said Cal-Am reacts as quickly as it can, but because the breaks are a peninsula-wide problem, sometimes the repairs are not made as soon as Cal-Am and the city would like.

Supervisors continue items

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors Oct. 30 heard hours of testimony on three major local developments, but continued action on each.

An appeal by Carmel Valley Ranch that asks supervisors not to require a specific environmental impact report for its final phase of development has been scheduled for 9 a.m. Nov. 13 in the county courthouse in Salinas.

Review of a Pebble Beach Corp. plan to build a hotel, condominium and golf course complex was continued until 2:45 p.m. Nov. 6.

Fifteen minutes earlier on the same day supervisors will again review a plan to develop some residential units, a restaurant and hotel on the El Sur Ranch in Big Sur.

Readings show increased smog in Valley

By EARL MOSER

SMOG APPROACHES in a very subtle and gradual manner. People think their air is clean until, all of a sudden, oxidant readings have passed the danger mark.

In the 1940s when Lois and I moved to the Los Angeles area, Mount Baldy was a beautiful sight. You could see the 10,000-foot peak sharply. Gradually, almost imperceptibly, it disappeared.

Several years passed before Prof. Hagenschmidt of Cal Tech discovered what caused smog. The hydrocarbons and oxides of nitrogen emitted by automobiles and factories — when acted upon by sunlight — produced ozone and other harmful chemicals.

An air pollution district was formed, and efforts were made to eliminate pollution. It was too late. Yes, catalytic converters were installed on cars, but the tremendous increase in number of cars more than offset these efforts. Today, damaging smog has spread as far as San Bernardino, Riverside, Palm Springs and Santa Barbara. First, second and even third alerts are frequent.

The Los Angeles experience is why I have followed the smog readings (oxidant index) ever since our Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District was formed in 1966. Carmel Valley has had an air monitoring station for several years, but only since the air-conditioned facility was brought to Carmel Valley Village have the readings been completely reliable. I receive a monthly report of these readings, and when they approach the danger level I begin to shudder.

We all know that Carmel Valley is a tiny air pocket. Whenever the temperature inversion layer gets down to 1,000 or 1,200 feet, pollutants slosh up and down the Valley until the level rises higher. Oxidant readings measure the amount of smog.

The State Air Pollution Control Board tells us the danger point is 10 parts per million (ppm) of ozone. At that point, sensitive people begin to experience eye smarting and sensitive plants are damaged.

September readings (Carmel Valley) were as follows:

	1984	1983
Full hours when readings were .06 or higher	40	26
Full hours when at .07 ppm or higher	26	17
Full hours when at .08 ppm or higher	15	16
Full hours when at .09 ppm or higher	2	3
Full hours when at .10 ppm or higher	0	2

Both 1983 and 1984 are disturbing, but the 40 hours in September of 1984 at .06 ppm, I hope, do not presage a trend. We will look with great interest for the October and November figures.

What can we do if we find the trend is constantly up? These are three things that would help:

- Make certain that the number of new residential units allowed in the Carmel Valley Master Plan is not exceeded.
- Correct the traffic bottleneck at the mouth of the Valley. (Idling cars emit pollution — more so than when traveling at normal speeds.)
- Adopt a mandatory inspection of catalytic converters.

THIS PHOTO was submitted to the Pine Cone/Outlook by Jack Hermanson, campaign coordinator for Howard Brunn's run for supervisor. In a letter to Karin Strasser Kauffman's campaign committee, Hermanson said: "One of your Carmel Valley neighbors shared the enclosed photos of your signs with us." The letter made reference to a county ordinance that prohibits political signs in the public right of way, but the correspondence failed to note that the ordinance would not become effective until amost two weeks after he wrote the letter Oct. 12. Either political zeal or an obsessive desire to clean up Carmel Valley is considered as a possible motive behind the removal of this and all the other Strasser Kauffman signs during the night a few weeks ago.

THE VALLEY SAGE

BY VICTORIA ANDREWS

Valley sign bandits strike

SIGNS of the times: My, my, what intrigue has appeared on the forefront of the local supervisorial race between Howard Brunn and Karin Strasser Kauffman.

Two weeks ago, the main drag through the Valley was stripped of all the roadside signs that supported Karin Strasser Kauffman. Thursday morning, Oct. 11, our Valley candidate for supervisor discovered on her way to a debate with Brunn that the 12 miles from the mouth of the Valley to the Village were utterly bereft of the placards that had appeared in such abundance only the day before. Brunn's signs remained, however.

The wimpy culprit(s) had chosen the moonless night of Oct. 10 for the theft — which seems more suited to the fraternity scene than the local political landscape. But then the thief grew brave...sort of. In broad daylight on the afternoon of Oct. 23, the Sage spotted the reckless bandit hoisting a Strasser Kauffman sign into his red sedan, into which he also hopped a second later.

Unfortunately, I was in a long line of cars and couldn't stop in time to question the culprit. However, I have since done a bit of sleuthing, and the evidence doesn't look too good for Howard Brunn's over-zealous supporter and sign collector. Perhaps he'll get his comeuppance from Mr. Brunn?

At any rate, Rick Marshall from Brunn's campaign headquarters told the Sage that the county picked up the signs — Brunn's as well as Strasser Kauffman's. A check with Monterey County Zoning Administrator Dale Ellis shed no additional light. Ellis said he was sure no one from the planning department had any involvement.

We now take you to the public works department, where engineer Mo Orrett said: "Sure, we have a whole pile of them, real estate signs included." The signs, he continued, were removed — ready? — Monday, Oct. 22, by crews from his department who picked up signs from the public right-of-way along Carmel Valley Road and delivered them to headquarters in Salinas.

What about the night of Oct. 10? Well, two problems arise. Orrett said the county wasn't about to pay overtime to have the work done at night (to what end?), and, also, the county ordinance that governs such matters didn't take effect until Oct. 22.

In response to my inane but journalistically necessary question, Strasser Kauffman headquarters' volunteers said no, of course they didn't remove signs supporting her. And Brunn's camp is sticking to its guns that it's all the county's doings.

That position is not enhanced by a letter from Jack Hermanson, campaign coordinator for Brunn, to the Strasser Kauffman campaign. The letter, dated Oct. 12, states: "We realize you are aware of the new county ordinance regarding these signs (on the public right of way). We feel sure you will want to take immediate steps to have them removed."

Holy words from a campaign that also is advertised on the public roads. Besides, it hardly accounts for the early sign theft in Mission Fields, in Monterey, and along other roads in the Valley on private property.

In addition to having about as much class as chewed gum on a sidewalk, political sign theft shows a serious lack of insight into human nature. It is hard to believe that anyone over the age of five would actually believe that if people stop seeing signs for a candidate they support, they will not vote for that person. Surely, both Brunn and Strasser Kauffman are sufficiently well-known by now that identification along the roadside won't tip the scales significantly.

So regardless of the protestations of innocence, the only logical deduction from this fascinating drama is that something a little rotten is wafting from the headquarters of the candidate who says, "Experience counts." What kind of experience?

It would be a nice gesture on all fronts if political placards were removed right after election day, regardless of whether they rest on public property. Right now they're no more than freckles on the landscape, but they always start to look like warts a few days after the contest has ended. Now there's a job for the sign thief.

Hidden Valley Music Seminars has elected three new members to its board of trustees — Hilton Bialek of Carmel, Charles Guilford of Carmel Valley and Glynn Lockwood of Monterey.

Also, opera plans are taking shape, and the scores are out for Rossini's Barber of Seville and Carlisle Floyd's operatic version of Steinbeck's Of Mice and Men. Additionally, Hidden Valley will present the play Of Mice and Men concurrently with its opera season, which is scheduled to begin Jan. 18.

Scheduled for Nov. 20-25 at Hidden Valley is a harp master class under the direction of Susann McDonald. A participant recital will be given Saturday, Nov. 24. Also, two free concerts are planned during the session — on Nov. 21 and Nov. 22. Sixteen-year-old Naoko Yoshina, who has traveled from Japan for the class, will be featured harpist Nov. 21.

★★★

Carmel River Watch will meet Thursday, Nov. 1, in the education room at the back of the First Baptist Church at Carmel Valley and Schulte roads. The main topic of the meeting, which will start at 7:30 p.m., will be the controversial portion of the river known as the Boronda Reach. The CREW meeting is open to all interested persons.

★★★

BYOS: Bring your own shotgun to the turkey shoot, but be sure not to take aim at a turkey. They will be reserved for prizes at the annual competition that benefits the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Department. If you've a yen for a drumstick, head up to the Miller property at the top of Cachagua Grade either Saturday, Nov. 3, or Sunday, Nov. 4, and fire away at the paper targets the fire department will furnish along with the shotgun shells.

★★★

The mess at mid-Valley continues to frustrate motorists who put their lives and their sanity at risk each time they try to make a turn off Carmel Valley Road either onto Robinson Canyon Road or into the shopping center at Berwick Drive.

Algernon the rat had a much easier time figuring out his mazes than we have as we wind through the row of orange pylons. I know the crews from the county and from Granite Construction don't really have it in for us, but whoever puts the markers out each day should be required to drive through his own confusion before leaving it to us.

Tree trimming crews have been hard at work in the Valley to remove branches that hung over the power lines so that we may have fewer occasions this winter to make coffee outdoors on the barbecue during a raging storm.

A local resident expressed his belief that the Monterey pines should not be pruned this time of year. He said rising sap bleeds out of the tree wounds and provides limousine service to the bark beetle — which lays its eggs directly below the bark and often kills the trees in the process. As tree bugs are not among the topics yet studied by the Sage, a few calls to local experts seemed in order.

I'm pleased to report that forest ranger Jerry Ranger (truly!) has alleviated my worries. He noted, logically, that the sap isn't rising at this time of year, and added that the beetles don't enter the trees through the cuts but rather through the bark — hence their name.

Strasser Kauffman party planned

Supporters of Fifth District supervisorial candidate Karin Strasser Kauffman will gather at The Thunderbird, The Barnyard, on election day Nov. 6 to celebrate the end of their campaign and to watch what they believe will be their candidate's victory. Returns watching will commence at 8 p.m.

Karin Strasser Kauffman, a political science instructor on leave from Monterey Peninsula College, was the top vote-getter in the June primaries.

By law, the top two vote-getters must vie for the supervisorial position because neither gained 50 percent of the primary vote. Mrs. Strasser Kauffman seeks the post held by William Peters, who will seek re-election.

Friends and supporters of Mrs. Strasser Kauffman are invited to drop by The Thunderbird Nov. 6 and watch the returns with her. Further information is available at 625-5515.

CARMEL VALLEY PERSPECTIVE

Subdivision committee meets for first time

By MICHAEL GARDNER

A "REVOLUTIONARY" citizen advisory committee that will pass judgment on who can build and where in Carmel Valley met for the first time Oct. 25 to receive an introduction to its task.

The first session of the Carmel Valley Subdivision Evaluation Committee was rather uneventful, as members were introduced to each other and county planning staff and discussed why their services are necessary.

Committee members must now mull over the planning documents given them last Thursday and will meet again Nov. 15 to select a chairman and formalize how they will conduct the business at hand.

That business is rating individual residential subdivision applications on a point system to be used by the county planning commission and board of supervisors to determine who gets to build in Carmel Valley.

The committee is not expected to receive its first project application until December because Monterey County Superior Court Judge Richard Silver must approve the Carmel Valley Master Plan and lift a moratorium on discretionary building permits in the Valley.

Planner Lynn Mounday estimates there are about 10 subdivisions ready to be reviewed by the committee starting in December.

Under the adopted master plan allocation system, the county will allow 118 new units in the first year of the plan. The number of allowable units will decrease annually over the 20-year life of the master plan. Only 1,181 new homes can be constructed in Carmel Valley over the next 20 years.

The approximately 1,000 existing lots of record are not subject to this allocation system.

The question is how to allocate building permits since county officials expect far more applications than the number of units allowed in any one year.

In response, supervisors included in the master plan a point system by which an appointed evaluation committee would rate proposed subdivisions in four different areas: land use (0-30), biological resources (0-20), hazards (0-20) and visual resources (0-30).

The land use category focuses on the master plan stipulation that "the rural residential quality of Carmel Valley must be preserved (and) a diversity of land use paterns should be maintained."

•

THE LAND use category also lists some criteria the committee can use to rate the individual projects.

"Ideally, development shall be sited on the natural benches that are located off the Valley floor and below the steep visually sensitive hillsides of the Valley or in areas that cannot be seen from the scenic highways," the master plan states.

The plan adds that new residential subdivision development should be restricted to the mouth of the Valley, mid-Valley or Carmel Valley Village.

Existing services also will be a consideration.

"The adequacy of the public services and facilities may be a factor which will direct the location, type and timing of development in some areas of the Valley," the master plan states.

"As examples, development should be located where roads have excess capacity, but not where existing water mains are undersize and cannot maintain fireflows."

Developers could obtain additional points in the land use category by providing low- and moderate-cost housing, providing access other than off Carmel Valley Road, and clustering the project to create more "uninterrupted" open space.

Another separate category the committee will use in judging development is "biological resources."

"The major objective is to protect the natural diversity of biological habitats that exist," the master plan states.

"Of primary importance is the riparian habitat along the entirety of the Carmel River and its several tributaries."

Points could be subtracted from proposed developments that are "in important ecological zones (and) used by wildlife for access routes to water or feeding grounds."

Another category for committee consideration is "visual resources."

"The visual enjoyment of moving through a valley with steep brown and green hills, wild flowers, farm buildings, row crops and attractively sited residential and commercial development must be preserved."

The master plan says "subdivisions shall restore and enhance the visual quality of land that has been degraded. Lots on canyon edges and hilltops shall be discouraged.

"Subdivisions shall be planned so that natural features and terrain are incorporated into the development plan to minimize the visual impact of all improvements.

•

'THE VISUAL alteration of natural land forms caused by cutting, filing, grading, or removing of vegetation shall be minimized through sensitive siting and design of all improvements."

The master plan also requires that the site must be restored "as much as possible" to its "natual appearance."

The fourth category the committee will use to judge projects is the area of "hazards." Projects will be rated on potential fire, flooding or earthquake hazards.

Developers who best meet the criteria will most likely receive high scores and stand a better chance of winning the approval of the planning commission and supervisors.

Those who do not can modify their projects or drop out of the competition for allocations.

Superisor William Peters told the committee Oct. 25 that the allocation system is a "revolutionary" concept in Monterey County planning.

"We are embarking on a new era in planning in Monterey County," Peters said of the master plan and committee.

Peters said the subdivision evaluation committee recommendations will be seriously considered by the board of supervisors and planning commission.

"You are in a stronger position than any of the advisory committee members we've ever had," he said.

Planning Director Robert Slimmon warned the committee that it should appoint a strong chairman who can keep the developers and their attorneys at bay.

Staff expressed concern that the committee would get into verbal frays with developers, who will try to change their plans at the meeting to win more points.

And Slimmon cautioned that the committee is going to face the dilemma of being both loved and hated.

"You're going to be the most popular committee in Carmel Valley," he laughed.

The committee also received a brief sketch of how the process will work.

First, developers must submit a plan that has a draft environmental impact report already prepared.

The committee will review the project in open, public sessions. Scoring of each project must take place within 15 days of the original hearing, Slimmon said.

The committee must vote in public and make findings to support why a project was scored the way it was, he added.

A developer who does not like his score can appeal through the planning commission or revise and resubmit the project.

After a project is scored, the development then is presented to the planning commission.

Commissioners will review the proposal and either rate the development higher or lower. Then the same process is followed by supervisors.

Twice each year supervisors will gather all of the scored proposals and determine which ones will receive an allocation for building.

A develoment that receives an allocation does not necessarily have to build that year.

Members of the committee are: Richard Dalsemer, Donna Dougherty, Sam Smith, Robin Beare and Bud Zanetta. Alternates are Don Higgins and Earl Moser.

HILLTOP HOMES that can be seen from Carmel Valley Road are discouraged by the recently-adopted master plan. And a special subdivision evaluation committee actually can rate projects lower if the development can be seen from the road. The committee had its first organizational meeting Oct. 25 and will meet again Nov. 15. The committee is not expected to begin project reviews until December. (Michael Gardner photo.)

Prop. 36 could dash hopes for new dam, officials say

"Devastating" is how officials describe the impact Prop. 36 would have on the budgets of local governments.

In the Carmel area, passage of Prop. 36 on Nov. 6 could kill prospects for a new dam on the Carmel River and drastically reduce county and school revenues.

However, the budget of the city of Carmel would not be as adversely affected because it does not heavily rely on user fees and property taxes for income.

Often called "Jarvis II" or "Son of Prop. 13," the complex tax-cutting Prop. 36 has come along just as the schools, cities and counties have begun to recover from the effects of its predecessor.

Its principal author is Howard Jarvis, the man who teamed with Paul Gann in 1978 to successfully launch property tax reform Prop. 13.

Prop. 36 is Jarvis' response to a multitude of new taxes and fees adopted by state and local governments to offset the revenue losses caused by passage of Prop. 13.

There are three key provisions in Prop. 36.

One provision would require that the state roll back property tax assessments to 1978 levels and refund those taxes plus 13 percent interest.

Prop. 36 also would tie property tax and user fee increases to the consumer price index. If the CPI rises 3 percent per year, then the property taxes and user fees can only be increased by 3 percent.

Prop. 36 also would require a two-thirds vote of the electorate for any increased taxes or user fees.

However, because of the complex wording of the measure, local officials who talked with the Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook predict that, if approved, Prop. 36 would be challenged in court.

Carmel Unified School District has just begun to rebound from the one-two-three punch of Prop. 13, declining enrollment and the Serrano-Priest decision, which limited funds for "high wealth" districts such as Carmel.

Business Manager Ed Miyasaki said he could discuss the potential ramifications of Prop. 36 only "in generalities" until the complex provisions are interpreted by the courts.

Miyasaki predicted that Carmel schools could lose between $200,000 and $500,000 in state revenues if Prop. 36 passes.

"You're going to see the kind of panic like you saw with Prop. 13," Miyasaki said.

Two Carmel schools were closed, the middle school dipped to five periods a day, and staff was drastically cut as a response to the budget slashing Prop. 13.

The district has just $62,000 available in unrestricted reserves in its 1984-85 budget.

The school board recently adopted a resolution that urges voters to reject Prop. 36.

"We would be almost crippled," is how interim Supt. Rich Hawkins put it.

The defeat of Prop. 36 "is vital to the survival of our district," Trustee Pat Condren said.

"I would use the word devastating," added Trustee Doyle Clayton.

Monterey County faces similar problems, according to senior administrative analyist Joe Hart.

The county would lose between $7.4 to $8 million "one time" and see its budget dip by another $884,000 on a continual basis, Hart predicted.

Hart, too, said the courts will have to interpret the effects Prop. 36 would have on special districts, such as fire protection and lighting.

The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District probably could not build a new dam on the Carmel River because the funding plan for new water connection charges and rate hikes would have to be approved by a two-thirds majority of the voters instead of a simple majority.

Most government officials acknowledge that a two-thirds vote to raise taxes or fees is nearly impossibile.

The city of Carmel is in better shape, said Assistant City Administrator Greg D'Ambrosio.

The reason is the city does not heavily rely on user fees and property taxes for income. The bulk of city income is derived from the sales and hotel taxes, he explained.

The city could lose the $350,000 it raised when the hotel tax was raised from 8 to 10 percent, he said.

And another approximately $100,000 in property taxes would have to be returned from city coffers, he said.

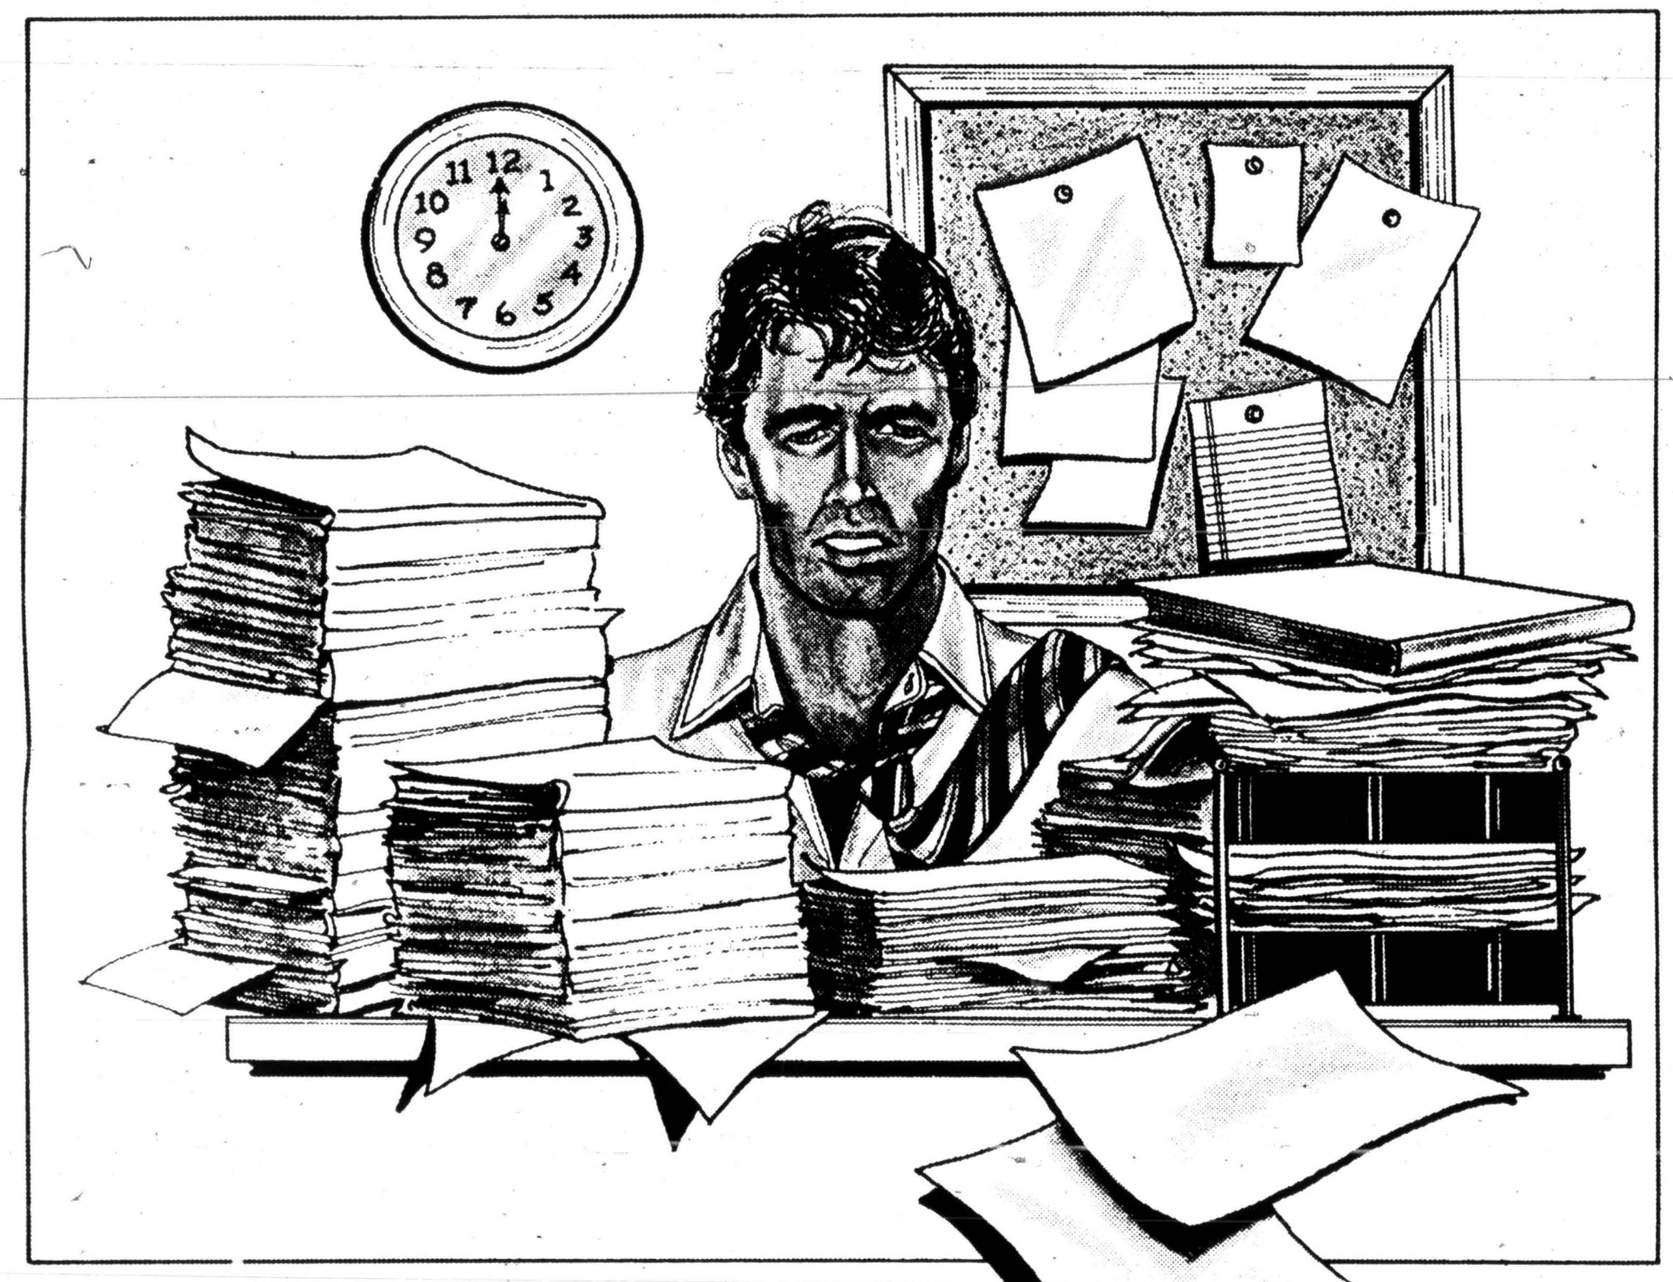
The city was in the process of a user fee study, which could have raised the fees for such things as building permits, dog licenses and business licenses.

But the city stopped the study when Prop. 36 qualified for the ballot. One provision of the proposition could force government agencies to roll back the increased fees to almost 1978 levels.

But since the city did not adopt the higher fees, that provision will not adversely impact Carmel.

"All in all, we'll be okay," he said.

"Do you run your business or does your business run you?"



Today's business challenges have new solutions. Shrinking margins, costly inventories, and tough competition are all factors in everyday business. The need for effective resource planning and staff management is obvious. But the solution may not be.

The answer is not to add staff or limit marketing. Instead, use your time more productively, employ your resources and people better. Reach out to meet your goals with a business computer. The result is a more efficient, profitable and cost effective business.

Business computers can assist you in making the most of your resources, help manage your time better, by giving you the tools to manage . . . to create . . . to challenge . . . by harnessing today's business facts.

But just as every major element in your business is different, computers and compuuter companies are unique. Each offers its own particular capabilities and benefits.

How, then, do you pick the right computer? First you begin by selecting the right computer company!

Consider the following FACTS; Legacy Computer Systems is the ONLY computer company (in the Monterey Bay Area) that is completely automated.

We have our own Multi-User business system with the following business applications (completely intergrated) up and running: General Ledger, Accounts Payable, Accounts Receivable, Inventory Control, Purchasing, Bill of Materials, Job Costing, Work In Progress, Material Requirement Planning. Of course, we use word processing, electronic filing with the use of electronic spreadsheets.

Experience is what Legacy offers its customers, 17 years worth. And thats worth a lot. Consider what INC. magazine (may 84) had to say. "Last December, Legacy received a $750,000 order from American Telephone & Telegraph Co." Ask yourself, why would one of the largest companies in the world buy computers and computer related products from a local Carmel based company? Experience, short and simple.

Stop by and discover for yourself what Legacy has to offer.

CONSCIENCE OF CARMEL

BY GUNNAR NORBERG

Build library wing

OFF AND ON during the past two decades, the board of directors of the Harrison Memorial Library has sought the support of its parent body — the Carmel City Council — for a substantial increase in the housing of its facilities.

And twice in that period, the city council has asked voters directly whether a new and much larger library building should replace the Harrison Memorial Library structure on Ocean Avenue.

In both ballot questions, the proposed new and larger library building was to be located at Sunset Center. And, in both ballot inquiries, voters decisively turned thumbs down on the idea of replacing the existing library building with a new and much larger one to be located at Sunset.

The last of those ballot inquiries, as readers will no doubt recall, was disapproved just a year ago by a 2-1 margin. After that rejection, the library board and the city council mulled over the problem of what to do to provide needed extra room for library use.

Since it seemed clear that city voters strongly objected both to the idea of moving the city library out of its existing building and also to replacing it entirely with a new structure somewhere else, the library board and the city council soon reached the reasonable conclusion that the right way to proceed would simply be to add a wing to the existing building. And where reasonably could the room be found for such a wing? Again what seemed an obvious answer emerged: use of the right-of-way on the adjoining Lincoln street between Ocean Avenue and Sixth Street.

This would, of course, involve the closure of that streetway to vehicle traffic, and San Francisco traffic consultant Joe Holland was engaged to determine if there would be any meaningful adverse impact on traffic circulation or traffic congestion as a result of such a street closure. Holland said there would be no adverse effect on local traffic patterns.

But now Mayor Charlotte Townsend has met with a committee which includes owners of business properties and store operators in the city business district, and this committee has presented a petition opposing this Lincoln Street solution to the library expansion dilemma. The committee has asked that its petition be circulated to the members of the city council and that it be discussed at the Nov. 6 council meeting.

The petition asks the council either to put that Lincoln street library extension proposal before voters on an election ballot or include it in a coming community questionnaire to be mailed to voters.

Despite the conclusion reached by traffic consultant Holland, the questioning committee thinks traffic problems could be created by the closure of the short Lincoln street block next to the library — something which seems to me most unlikely.

The committee also thinks local tax dollars would be used to construct the proposed Lincoln street wing. This is, of course, largely a misconception. The library board already has on hand nearly $1 million — none of which was derived from taxes — to be used in the construction of the proposed library wing.

This is gift money accumulated over a period of years, along with interest earned on that gift money. While this $1 million may not be quite enough to cover all the building costs, it will certainly cover most of them, and the city council would have no great difficulty in contributing any needed extra amount if it so decided to do.

•

THERE IS, however, another expense which would be added to the regular library operating costs, and this added expense would use some tax dollars on an annual basis, because of the addition of the proposed wing.

Last year when there was a proposal to build a second library building diagonally across the street from the present Harrison Memorial Library, this question of added operating expenses to staff the two separated library units, came before the city council.

Library Director Margaret Richter said that if the council would put a ceiling on the tax dollars it would contribute yearly, she and the library board would then agree to operate the proposed two-unit library plant without asking for any extra city funding.

Starting in the 1983-84 fiscal year, this ceiling on city-derived funding for library purposes was set at $315,000, and that same limit was applied in the succeeding 1984-85 fiscal year.

If this yearly sum would be expected to cover a two-unit library setup, it should certainly cover the operating cost if just an attached wing were added to the existing library building.

The library board does receive some funding in addition to that annual $315,000 which comes directly from the appropriations by the city council. In the 1983-84 year, for example, the county board of supervisors provided $85,000 and it is scheduled to provide the same amount in the present fiscal year.

The city council, the library board, and a great many Carmelites believe this yearly sum should be substantially larger. Why? Because the state describes the service area of the Harrison Memorial Library as being not just the city of Carmel but much more — extending in Carmel Valley to Los Laureles Road and down the coast to Malpaso Creek south of Carmel Highlands.

And what about an annual contribution from the state itself? That also is much less than it should be. In the 1983-84 fiscal year it was a mere $31,000. There are also other minor revenues received by the library (in 1983-84 fines collected were projected at $7,000; and the contribution of the Friends of Harrison Memorial Library were projected at $5,000).

It was the state — with its relatively small annual contribution which declared the Harrison Memorial service area as being not just the city of Carmel, but a much larger area totaling 57.6 square miles and including a population of not just the 4,707 residents of the city but the 15,798 people in the state-declared service area.

Despite funding inequities which I and many others through the years have tried to ameliorate, it is still true that the city of Carmel has provided to its appreciate residents, and to aware and informed others both near and far, a library service as superior of its kind as are its achievements in other cultural fields — music, art, literature, and the theater.

As I write this, it is my hope that the work of extending the proposed Harrison Memorial Library wing into Lincoln street, will go forward unimpeded.

BENEFIT STAGED FOR HOSPICE

Hair design, fashions and a dance party combined in one event Oct. 19 at Rancho Canada Golf Club in Carmel Valley as a benefit for the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

The event was staged by Rod and Marsha Bogwicz, owners of the Totally You Salon in The Crossroads.

The hair designs were presented by the salon artists — Gloria Jelladian, Marsha Bogwicz, Didsy Jayubo, Denise Spradley, Reggie Marquez and Tom Sisk. The fashions worn by 27 young Monterey models were exhibited by Buff La Grange, Chattons of Carmel, Athena, and Judith Bergfors.

The party and dance that followed brought together people of varied walks of life. They danced to the music of Robert Pulido. The evening brought together a diversified number of people, gave the community a chance to see the new fashions in hair and clothing, and donated $500 to the Hospice of the Monterey Peninsula.

Heather Glenn nearly complete

HEATHER GLENN, the last building to be constructed under the old Carmel zoning laws, will be completed in the first two weeks of November — after 10 months of construction — and is available for leasing now.

The $1 million commercial and apartment complex was developed by local resident Ed Dickenson with his Fresno partners, Nick Pecora, Hiram Goya and Rod Goya on "one of the last big chunks of land in Carmel," according to Dickenson.

The building is located on Mission Street near Eighth Avenue and is technically within a Residential/Limited Commercial (RC) zone by the new standards, but will be allowed to lease under the more liberal Service Commercial (SC) zoning restrictions through conditional use permits. All other buildings under construction at this time are already within the zone in which they will be able to lease.

The two-story complex will house commercial shops and offices on the first floor and consists of six private apartments on the second. A secured underground garage provides 15 parking spaces for the commercial and apartment tenants, with a key-operated elevator to the two floors above.

The commercial section has 5,000 sq. ft., which can be partitioned off to a maximum of 10 separate leases with 400 sq. ft. as the smallest lease. These leases, with the approval of the city, can fall under the SC zone, which is described in the planning commission literature as "an appropriate location for services, offices, residential, and limited retail activities that primarily serve local needs."

The RC zone where Heather Glenn is located is described in the same literature as "an appropriate location for permanent and transient residential uses, and limited service uses that provide for local needs." Some of the uses permitted in the SC zone and not permitted in the RC zone include — but are not exclusive to — hardware stores; paint, glass, and wallpaper stores; dairy product stores (with conditions); bakery products (with conditions); furniture stores; drug stores; book stores; and florists.

A complete list can be obtained from the planning department at Carmel City Hall. The main concern of the city, according to assistant planning director Diane White, is that the commercial leases in the Heather Glenn building not be of the high tourist and pedestrian traffic kind, but consistent with the predominantly residential area.

"We felt that the owners of Heather Glenn were in agreement with the type of tenant we want in that area," Mrs. White said. "We would hate to see intensive retail sites there. The owners don't want that anyway, as a business of that type would not do well there, so we went for lowered service and retail."

The agreement was reached in a meeting with City Atty. Don Freeman, Ms. White and the owners.

Dickenson said the building was developed for mixed commercial/residential use after he observed what the city wanted from other construction.

"They said that there were enough condominiums and houses in the city but what was needed was apartments," Dickenson said.

"Some of the more interesting buildings downtown are the ones mixed with residences above and commercial below," Ms. White said. "It is the more traditional, European style and is consistent with the concept of Carmel as a small village." This use is only appropriate in the commercial zones, she added.

The leasing agent, Doug Forzani of First Capital Properties, calls the three one-bedroom and three two-bedroom apartments "deluxe" and said they are outfitted with microwaves, trash compactors, small laundry facilities, and wood-burning fireplaces. Some of the two-bedroom apartments have a private patio, and there is a trash chute located on the second floor that drops to the garage.

A security gate protected by a buzzer system is located on the stairs leading up to the second floor. The apartments are leasing for $950 for a one-bedroom and $1,250 for a two-bedroom. There have been quite a few inquiries into the apartments and commercial spaces, according to Forzani.

Ed Dickenson may be familiar to area residents as the builder and owner with Nick Pecora of the Carmel Village Theater and as the disc jockey for the past 20 years of the KNRY Big Band show "Way Back Now." He and Pecora plan to start a two-house project on the corner of Ninth Avenue and Dolores Street. Dickenson is also an insurance agent with Allstate in Monterey.

Dickenson said the land where Heather Glenn is located remained undeveloped for many years because United Artists held the lease and did not wish to build there.

BUSINESS BOARD STAYS BUSY

The Carmel Business License and Code Review Board at its Oct. 25 meeting approved one transfer of a business location, nine new business licenses (three for new owners of existing businesses), one transfer of business ownership, and discussed two special events.

• Guys and Dolls Jewelry request to move from its location on Pantilles Court on Dolores Street to Mission Patio on Mission Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues was approved. Guys and Dolls features hand-made jewelry and jewelry repair.

• Orientique was granted a new business license subject to a building inspection for an antique shop specializing in the "full range," according to part owner Lucille Beasley, of Oriental artifacts. The shop also plans a special showing of contemporary Japanese prints, Ms. Beasley told the licensing board. May Waldroup, owner of the Thunderbird Bookstore, was listed as Ms. Beasley's partner.

• Carmel Doll Shop and Hospital received a business license subject to approvel of a use permit. Owners Harvey and Adrienne Zisser were not aware of the permit, due to mailing mix-ups as a result of their move from Orange County. The shop will sell antique and collectible dolls. The "hospital" is for dolls only in need of repairs.

• The Sticky Wicket Bookshop ran into a sticky problem with the term "used books" and was granted a business license subject to the planning director's interpretation of the use permit and shop merchandise. The bookstore will have new books, so owner Dennis Rowedder said sale of used books was not really all that important.

"I don't expect to make any money," he said. "I just want an uncomplicated life." His wife Patricia was also listed as part owner.

• Carmel Picture Framing will move into the Norberg Travel location on Dolores Street when it is vacated. Owner and framer George Tompkins was granted a business license subject to a building inspection.

• Mary Anna Bostwick was granted a business license for a chair at March Hare beauty salon to practice cosmetology.

• Crossbow Antiques' license request to continue the sale of antiques and reproductions was approved. New owner Margot Negahbani will be covered more extensively in a future column. The shop is located in the Bonnymead Court on Lincoln Street between Ocean and Seventh avenues.

• Sunset House Bed and Breakfast Inn received a belated business license without any problems, though Building Inspector Butch Malone said he wished to give the inn another inspection. New owners F. DeWolfe and Geraldine Emory purchased the inn from Elizabeth Thorpe Aug. 1 and were under the impression that all the legal matters had been taken care of.

• Friends of the Arts was granted a business license for an existing art gallery in the Bonnymead Court. New owner is Shirley Smith. The gallery will feature local artists, Ms. Smith told the licensing board.

• Alphabet Soup plans to continue in the same merchandise of gifts, stuffed animals, cards, stationery and bear sweaters (teddy, presumably). The new owner is listed as Dennis Hutchins.

CHANGE OF OWNERSHIP APPROVED

The transfer of ownership for Tony's Frame Shop from father, Anthony D. Klepich, to son, Anthony M. Klepich, met with no problems from the business license board, which recognized the name and the shop tucked away on San Carlos Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues.

The custom frame shop was started by the elder Klepich in 1955, and his son has been running the business for the past four years. Tony Klepich had no need of changing the ownership until recently when he decided to sell the shop for personal reasons.

The shop is currently in escrow, and Klepich did not have to look far to find a buyer. Ed Broderick, Tony Klepich's assistant, has purchased the frame shop, and business will continue without pause.

"Ed has been doing most of the framing, anyway," Klepich said. "We are just showing him the business aspect of the shop."

Escrow should close Jan. 2, and Klepich will stay at least until then. As custom framing is very much a craftsman-style profession with all the Old World working relationships, Broderick is more like a member of the family than just a co-worker, Klepich said.

ONE HOUR PHOTOS IN VALLEY

The KIS lab is a self-contained print developer that does prints up to size five-by-seven for 110, 126, 135 and disk color film. Reprints can be done in 10 minutes.

A combination of computer and manual process, the KIS allows the operator to set manually the color tone with a three-filter ring system and the color density (exposure) with a separate dial.

"You can tune it better," Garry Root said.

The Roots hope to get a poster machine soon that will allow them to make large prints and possibly do reductions.

Both Roots are long-time residents of Carmel Valley and met at Carmel High School where Mrs. Root's father, Neil Jensen, was vice principal. She said she has been "into photography for many years."

"My brother got me into it when I was a teenager," Mrs. Root said. "We always had a darkroom."

Garry Root, a journeyman carpenter, said he is "learning fast" about photography.

SO LONG, LINDA!

The Carmel Pine Cone/Carmel Valley Outlook is losing one of its favorite employees in mid-November to a move to El Paso, Tex., in December and motherhood in February. Linda d'Oliveira, advertising representative for the Pine Cone/-Outlook, will be missed when she leaves for Texas with her husband, Lieutenant Mark d'Oliveira, and we all look forward to seeing pictures of their baby as soon as we get the promised photos.

"Linda is a great person and one of the best sales persons we have. It will be a big, big loss," publisher Bill Brown said. "She will be missed by the paper and customers alike, but I am sure that her replacement, Ann Chamboess, will do a good job and fill the void Linda is leaving,"

Ms. Chamboess has her own advertising agency in Carmel Valley and teaches advertising at Monterey Peninsula College at night. She has been in Carmel Valley for one year after moving here from Greenwich, Conn.

ART WORLD UPDATES

Maria Lindley has left the Weston Gallery to represent the photographic work of Paul Caponigro and Tom Millea. Caponigro currently has a 30-year retrospective show of his work touring the nation. Millea is a local artist who works with platinum/palladium photography. He has been in the area for 15 years.

The Fawcett Gallery has opened on Dolores Street between Fifth and Sixth avenues in the former location of the James Peter Cost Gallery, which moved three doors up the street. The Fawcetts had a galler in Maui, Hawaii, for many years before they came to Carmel and bought the gallery license. The gallery will present a combination of local and non-local artists. Ed Fawcett is one of the artists that will be showing there.

The Rose Rock Gallery in Del Dono Court has been purchased by Patricia Selin, who will show her own work and the work of a local sculptor. Ms. Selin was the owner/operator of Skinny's Diet Foods and Desserts in the Del Monte Shopping Center before she decided to return to her art work.

NEW CV VIDEO STORE

The mouth of Carmel Valley has a new video store on Carmel Rancho and an established store in the Village has expanded into retail sales.

Video Connection opened in August on Carmel Rancho. While the store carries many American movies, owners Patricia Jowett and Zigmonte Hamburger are looking to develop a good following for their large selection of foreign and children's videos. They also offer pick-up and delivery of videos and/or video tape machines.

"If they call by five, they will get their machine and video between six and eight," Hamburger said.

Valley Video in the Village would like everyone to know that it now sells video cassette recorders and video equipment. "We want people to know they don't have to go into the city to get the same prices," said Janet Stein. "We also get a lot of questions about warranties. The warranties are from the manufacturer and are the same for every store."

Valley Video has been in the Village for a year, and, according to Janet, doing very well.

SERRA BICENTENNIAL

BY MSGR. FRANCES WEBER

Operation Alta California

JOSE DE GALVEZ was sent to Mexico by King Charles III for the purpose of making an official visitation of the entire viceroyalty. He arrived in 1765 and remained until 1771 — years in which he gained a wide knowledge of the extensive area.

Interested in knowing all about the details of missionary operations, Galvez wrote to the friars and asked for reports of their charges. With that information before him, he would then make an investigation of conditions himself.

Fray Junipero Serra made out his report and forwarded it to Galvez. Then the friar started out on a tour of three missions to the north, probably to get a better idea of them himself and to talk over future expansion of the apostolate.

Galvez was unhappy about certain aspects of the temporal operations then being followed. Even before all the reports had come in, he had determined to turn the mission temporalities over to the Franciscans. He felt this measure necessary to save the foundations economically.

On Aug. 12, 1768, Galvez signed a decree authorizing the missionaries to assume complete control of their establishments. He thus entrusted Serra and his co-workers with the difficult task of bringing order out of chaos and prosperity from ruination.

Throughout his years on the peninsula, Galvez kept in close touch with Serra. His appreciation of the Franciscan apostolate is obvious in a letter to the viceroy, wherein he says that "in the charity and zeal of the apostolic ministers who are in charge of the missions of this peninsula, I have found all the cooperation necessary to satisfy my desires."

When Jose de Galvez told Serra of his determination to occupy Alta California, the Mallorcan friar immediately offered to go in person as the first volunteer "to erect the holy standard of the cross in Monterey." He assured Galvez that other missionaries would not be lacking to join in that great enterprise.

This was the opportunity Serra had longed and prayed for — to preach pagan land and plant there the faith on unworked soil. It was, after all, the reason Serra had come to America.

Galvez and Serra planned carefully for the expedition that would thrust European presence into Alta California. It was decided, for example, that the existing peninsular missions would contribute sufficient material from church and sacristy for the first three foundations.

On Jan. 9, 1769, the San Carlos was ready to set out from La Paz. Galvez, Serra and the others were on hand. Galvez told the group that it was being sent out in the name of God, the kind and the viceroy to plant the standard of the Holy Cross among the heathen of New California.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

An elderly people really more prone to sleep problems than others? The answer is yes, according to Dr. William C. Dement of Stanford University. As people get older, he says, they often sleep less at night and more during the day, take longer to fall asleep, sleep less deeply, wake up earlier and feel more tired during the day. Studies have found that up to 90 percent of people between the ages of 60 and 80 suffer from insomnia. Although older people take more sleeping pills than any other group, Dr. Dement warns that these may be of little help, particularly if insomnia is a symptom of some other problem. Among possible problems, which physicians should diagnose, are depressions; drug or alcohol abuse; nocturnal myoclonus (the involuntary jerking of the legs); and medication side effects.

City council to weigh winter recreation effort

THE CARMEL City Council — in response to some emotional and persuasive arguments — appears ready to approve a winter recreation program.

City Administrator Doug Schmitz at 4 p.m. Nov. 6 is to present to the council a proposal that would include a part-time recreation supervisor and types of activities which could be offered.

Schmitz was directed to prepare the report after the council Oct. 16 unanimously approved the "concept" of a winter recreation program.

The unanimous vote followed a failed attempt by council members James Wright and Helen Arnold to require a needs assessment study before the city plunges into a new winter program.

Wright also is concerned about who the recreation committee is to serve. He did not want to operate a program just for non-residents. He wanted the council to pinpoint the area residents to be included in any activities.

The majority of the council — Mayor Charlotte Townsend and Councilmen David Maradei and Robert Stephenson — believe the recreation committee has pretty much conducted a needs assessment during its two-year tenure.

And the three argued that a needs assessment probably would cost as much if not more than a winter program.

City Planner Brian Roseth also reminded the council that the upcoming questionnaire will ask citizens if they support the idea of a full-time recreation program.

Mayor Townsend, Stephenson and Arnold also supported the concept of the summer program, which allowed city residents first priority in the activities. Then if there is room, non-city residents could participate as long as they paid an extra $5.

Council chambers filled quickly for the hearing on a proposed recreation program. Many of the supporters were there because they were fearful that a 100-signature petition in opposition to the program may sway the council to kill the proposal.

The petition, signed by city residents, opposed the idea of a full-time recreation program because it would duplicate current services and cost city taxpayers when non-city residents would provide the bulk of the participation.

The petition was presented to the council Oct. 2 by George Faul. None of the speakers Oct. 16 objected to the part-time proposal.

•

INSTEAD, more than a dozen speakers focused on the success of the summer program, how they would like to cooperate with the city for winter activities, and the need for such a project in Carmel.

"My son came home from school today and he had nothing to do," said resident Wendy Banks, who also is day director of Bay School.

"We definitely need it for our children," said resident Linda Perkins.

Marguerite Moore said she lives right outside the city limits, but she feels a "sense of community" with Carmel.

She said her family shops in Carmel and her husband refers his clients to Carmel businesses.

"We support what happens here not only with our bodies but with our dollars," Mrs. Moore said.

The city involves itself with planning matters outside its boundaries so the council could also help serve the needs of young people who live just on the fringe of the city borders, she continued.

Teri Stott told the council that River School parents had advanced $600 to offer a day care program there.

However, because the courts have ruled that a school cannot charge for extra-curricular activities, it is nearly impossible to offer a day care program, Mrs. Stott said.

Patty Cox praised the summer program offered by the city in conjunction with the school district.

"It was wonderful for my son to have a place to go. They need something more to do than to try to out-run the police on their skateboards," she said.

Bill Frost, a self-described grandfather of two children who participated in the summer activities, called the soccer clinic "absolutely outstanding. The money is well spent."

Frank Lynch, principal of Carmel Middle School, stressed that the school district wants to open its facilities for a recreation program.

"The district has the manpower and facilities. What we don't have is the money," he said.

Lynch and others stressed the need for a part-time supervisor who can coordinate all of the activities.

That also would prevent duplication of programs offered at Sunset Center or by other organizations, he said.

Representatives from the YMCA also told the council that the organization wants to work with the city to establish a variety of programs in the Carmel area.

•

"IF THERE is anything the YMCA can do I would really like to be part of it," Executive Director Art Sears said.

Leslie MacMillan, president of the River School Parent-Faculty Club, added that the recreation program could span the generation gap.

She said senior citizens could teach the kids. For example, an elderly woman could teach girls how to knit.

After the public discussion, the council spent about half an hour trying to decide whether to go ahead with the program.

City Administrator Doug Schmitz said porter of the recreation program proposal.

"I think the need is there and in a bigger number than we anticipate," he said.

Councilman Stephenson pointed out that hiring a coordinator would eliminate duplica- $18,000 is allocated in the 1984-85 municipal budget for recreation.

Stephenson said as long as city residents get first priority he does not mind opening the program to participants who live outside the Carmel boundaries.

Councilman Wright, despite insistence on a needs assessment study first, was not overwhelmingly oppposed to the proposal.

For example, at one point he said of the proposed day care program: "I'm not at all sure the way to provide it is through a recreation program. I'm a little leery of that (but) there is something there worth pursuing."

Maradei told Wright that a needs assessment study "will cost us a lot of money and I would rather see the money spent on a part-time director."

The hiring of a part-time director was one of several proposals included in the draft winter program recommended by a citizens committee.

Chairman Ken White presented the council with a plan to offer a variety of dance, art, music and sports activities for nearly every age group.

White also provided the council with a summary of particpation in the summer program.

Almost half (131) of the 277 participants were confirmed by the committee as being residents of the city, White said.

Youth program needs volunteer

The Carmel Youth Baseball league is in need of a volunteer supervisor who can coordinate a field development program.

The league and Del Monte Kennel Club have joined in a plan to develop additional baseball fields on the Carmel Middle School grounds.

The volunteer supervisor is needed to work with the field development committee and community groups to raise funds and help with the planning of construction.

The volunteer job is expected to take about 10 hours per week.

Applications can be sent to the field development committee, in care of Jerry Pullen, P.O. Box 194, Carmel, Ca. 93921.

Turkeys make prizes, not targets at weekend shoot

MARKSMEN don't have to be as accurate as Gary Cooper in Sergeant York to enter the sixth annual turkey shoot in upper Carmel Valley this weekend.

Last year, some 500 shooters entered the fundraising competition, which benefits the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Company.

Scheduled Saturday and Sunday, Nov. 3-4, the turkey shoot is a true test of the sharpshooter's skill. Just don't be confused by the title — turkeys are the prize, not the target.

"You get a dead frozen one if you win," explained Jaime del Valle, captain of the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Company.

For $3 per round, sharpshooters aim at a six-by-five-inch card during the shotgun competition, scheduled both days. In a field of 10 shooters, the one who scores the closest pellet to the center of the card wins the round.

New this year, a pistol shoot is scheduled Sunday only. The handgun targets are clay pigeons. There will even be a BB gun shoot for youngsters.

The turkey shoot action begins around 9 a.m. both days, del Valle said. It takes place on Cachagua Road, off Carmel Valley Road beyond the Village. Signs will direct both spectators and entrants to the site.

Competitors should bring their own 12-guage shotguns. Event organizers provide shells. Del Valle said there will be one shotgun available for use by those who can't bring their own.

In addition to the prizes of turkeys and hams, 18 different prizes will be awarded in a drawing. These include a Remington 870 shotgun, a five-horsepower Briggs and Stratton engine; 12 bottles of Durney wine and several dinners provided by local restaurants.

Admission is free to those who just want to watch the action. Hot dogs and beverages will be available. For more information about the sixth turkey shoot, call 659-2678.

AWARD-winning pianist and composer Jeffrey Swann will appear in recital at 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 4. Sponsored by Bronson Concerts, the recital will be presented in Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Swann recital Sunday

WORKS BY Haydn, Beethoven and Chopin will highlight the Sunday afternoon recital by pianist Jeffrey Swann. The 4 p.m. concert Nov. 4 marks Swann's third appearance in Carmel.

Swann has established himself as a pianist of international acclaim, having won every competition he has entered. He won first prize in the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium and La Scala's Dino Ciani competitions.

The artist also took top honors in the Warsaw Chopin, the Van Cliburn and Viana de Motta and Montreal competitions. Since these recognitions Swann has built a concert and recording career in Western Europe and the Warsaw block countries.

Swann is a graduate of the Juilliard School of Music, and in addition to his early success as a pianist, he has achieved important recognition as a composer. Two of his symphonies have been performed by the Dallas Symphony Orchestra and he has recently completed an opera based on the Prometheus Legend.

In his Carmel recital, Swann will play Haydn's Sonata in A-flat Major, Beethoven's Sonata No. 32 in C Minor and the Chopin Sonata No. 3 in B Minor. The concert will be presented at Sunset Theater, San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel.

Theater, marriage mix for this Cal Rep team

By ANNE PAPINEAU

SEASONAL UPROOTING, ego battles and competition — qualities basic to life in professional theater — hardly provide a hothouse for working marriages. But for a dozen years Karen Lamb and Ken Barton of California Repertory Theatre have managed to work and make their marriage work.

"As theater people you live with insecurity," noted Karen, familiar to audiences in her many roles this season with the struggling Pacific Grove-based professional company. "Ken and I would be very bored to work a 9-to-5 job for the security of weekly paychecks."

"We have a very good working relationship," explained her husband, stage manager Ken Barton. "I've directed Karen in many roles. Respect and communication are the keys."

Both Rhode Islanders, the couple met in a college production of The Madwoman of Chaillot — he played the prospector, she "a lady of the night," Ken recalled. College study took them to California, where Barton completed his master's degree in theater arts with a directing emphasis at San Jose State University. Karen took her bachelor's in education there.

From the outset, this couple established a pattern of avoiding any "9-to-5 syndrome." They married and completed a shoestring tour of Britain, Europe and Africa.

"We backpacked and ended up living in Greece," Karen said. "We were working for a restaurant in Corfu, where everything is cooked in an inch of olive oil."

'Ken and I would be very bored to work a 9-to-5 job for the security of weekly paychecks.'

When they returned to California in the mid-70s, Karen took a job as a substitute teacher, while Ken worked for General Electric. But that 9-to-5-ism was not to last. In 1977, both became members of Actors' Equity Association and were hired by the California Actors Theatre in Los Gatos.

"The beauty of professional regional theater is you get to do everything," he said. Their stretch with California Actors Theatre lasted three years, and in that time each gained valued experience. Ken worked as house manager and office manager. Karen toured in a variety of roles.

In the Cal Rep season still in progress, Lamb already has created several showcase, polished characters. As "second actress" in A.R. Gurney Jr.'s The Dining Room, she offered WASPish insight on the niceties of dining etiquette, her mannerisms suggesting the required middle age without benefit of makeup. She was an equally effective child in the same play.

An acting challenge was provided via the character Rosemary Fenton in that unabashed parody of '30s sleuth movies, Bullshot Crummond. Of that creature, Karen said: "I don't like to typecast people, but I have a hard time with one-dimensional ..."

"Dumb blondes," interjected Ken.

She can currently be seen as Sarah in The Norman Conquests, a comedic trilogy by Alan Ayckbourn that can be viewed singly or in any order.

"Sarah differs from me in that she truly allows herself to be victimized," explained the actress, a trace of New England in her off-stage voice. "I use other people in my background that I've met who have that martyr syndrome."

'Broadway didn't hold an allure for me. Here I am doing nine different roles or more. In New York you do the same roles for three or four months.'

"Sarah likes to be king," said Ken, a twinkle in his eye.

The couple expresses appreciation of the beauty that adjoins Cal Rep, particularly since a desire to broaden their theatrical

AT THE CHERRY FOUNDATION

BY WINSTON ELSTOB

Glimpse of the Cherrys

ONE OF THE few glimpses we have of the Cherrys at work — Carl the inventor and Jeanne the artist — is contained in an article written for The Carmelite newspaper at the end of October of 1930 by Dora Hagemeyer.

In those days the Cherrys were perhaps the most invisible couple among Carmel's Bohemian community, tucked away in their house up at Guadalupe and Fourth.

Dora Hagemeyer tells us she more or less stumbled upon them in their retreat. As she walked through the woods one day she was attracted by a disturbing noise (she later discovered the sound was made by an electric lathe), so she made her way around the house to an open door and, upon entering, found a long room "nearly all workshop...tools and strange-looking objects lying about," and someone at a lathe. That someone was Carl Cherry, but he didn't see her.

She noticed that at the end of the workshop the room extended itself to include a studio and against the wall were canvasses of all types, placed on easels and chairs. She looked hard at the pictures but could not quite make them out: "They seemed to be landscapes but the colors were purer and more vivid than nature even imagined in her most extravagant moments." She noticed someone working at the easel but this person also did not see or hear her.

Suddenly the noise stopped and the two people left their work simultaneously, and she was caught between them. Summoning up her courage, our young lady made no excuses and asked a question about one of the pictures.

At first it was a bewildering experience for the young interloper. She looked from the rhythmic blues and gold into the strange eyes of the artist, she tells us, where there seemed to be an understanding she could not grasp.

"I didn't believe the pictures but I believed her belief in them...then I began to see what she was doing. She was trying to get away from such contortions of the mentality as the modern world admires, into a place where the underlying rhythms of life and earth are felt."

Then the guest was shown into the Cherrys' house, which she noted was like another workshop. There was a great flat sheet of thin wood suspended from the ceiling with a hole in it. The walls were covered with books — poetry, textbooks on physics and chemistry, and dozens of mysteries. Experiments were strewn across the floor, and "the Navajo rugs, India prints and batiks gave a still more bizarre feeling."

Over tea, the Cherrys discussed sound, saying that an age of sound was approaching such as had never been dreamed of. They asked their guest if she would like to hear an amplified rendering of Stravinsky's Le Sacre du Printemps.

Our ears are now accustomed to loud sound, but in 1930 it must have seemed like black magic. She wrote that she practically jumped out of her chair when it started. "A deluge of sound descended upon me and for a few moments I almost drowned in the waves of it." She thought it was both tremendous and appalling, "but I did not ask for mercy."

Then they amplified the piano for her, which sounded like a series of great drums. "Imagine an enormous volume of pulsing sound pouring straight down on top of your head," she wrote.

Mrs. Hagemeyer ended her article by saying: "These two have more fun in that workshop and studio than all of Carmel does in the rest of Carmel."

The current offering in Cherry Hall, "The Rack of Dreams," based on the life and poetry of Dylan Thomas, will be presented Nov. 2, 3, 9 and 10 at 8 p.m. This production, directed by Dan Gotch, is dedicated to the memory of Geraldine Houston, late board president of the Carl Cherry Foundation.

LT. GEN. Mark Clark reviewed Japanese-American soldiers of the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, the most highly decorated unit of World War II. (U.S. Army photo).

Memorabilia, films depict Nisei soldiers

'YANKEE SAMURAI," an exhibit of historical photos, film and memorabilia that covers the relocation of Japanese-Americans during World War II and the exploits of Japanese-American soldiers, will be shown Nov. 7-12 at the Monterey Conference Center.

More than 80 photos illustrate how American citizens of Japanese descent fought with unheralded bravery for their country while their families were imprisoned in "relocation" camps by their fellow Americans.

One unit composed entirely of Japanese-American soldiers, the 442nd Regimental Combat Team, became the most highly decorated unit of the entire war.

First assembled at the Presidio of San Francisco, the exhibit enjoyed wide acclaim during a recent cross-country tour, breaking attendance records in Los Angeles and Hawaii. It has also been displayed at the U.S. Capitol and the California Capitol in Sacramento. The exhibit will become part of the Smithsonian Institution's 1986 celebration of the bicentennial of the Constitution.

The local showing is sponsored by the Defense Language Institute in cooperation with local Japanese-American veterans groups.

The exhibit will be open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the Serra Ballroom of the Monterey Conference Center, Wednesday, Nov. 7 through Monday, Nov. 12. Japanese-American veterans will conduct guided tours, and several mini-theaters will offer continuous showings of the PBS documentary, Nisei Soldier. Admission is free. THEATER REVIEW
BY JOANNE TENENBAUM

Show presents gentle Thomas

The Rack of Dreams, a theatrical evening adapted and directed by Dan Gotch from the writings of Dylan Thomas and currently playing at Carmel's Carl Cherry Foundation, presents a surprisingly gentle slice of the life and language of Welsh poet Dylan Thomas.

Better remembered for his strong imagery, powerful emotion, and lifelong battle with booze, Thomas is here evoked elegiacally, treading the paths of his Swansea boyhood in search of "the long dead child within."

That four actors, a piano accompanist, and a single modest setting can make us see those paths so vividly is a tribute to the beauty of Thomas' poetic language, the strength of the performers, and the skill of the director.

The setting suggests a cottage or a pub, with coats, scarves, and caps hanging on the wall. Painted backdrops by set designer Carey Crockett resemble a memory of the seashore, an apt reinforcement of the language of the piece. The evening combines straightforward poetry readings, books in hand, with dramatic enactments of brief scenes.

Such an evening is a reminder that all drama is essentially poetic. Thomas' lyrical lines lend themselves easily to the stage. Their rhythm and imagery capture the imagination and paint vivid pictures in the mind.

"The memories of childhood have no order and no end," the readers tell us, and Thomas' visions of childhood remembered pour forth in a rush, like a letter to a lover who is lost but not forgotten.

The cast of four offers many voices. As narrator, Jim Jensen gives a smooth performance, at home with the nuances of reminiscence and the variety of voices he is given. The smooth rhythm of his performance is the fulcrum of the evening.

Carey Crockett is particularly versatile. He creates, in quick, skillful strokes, a variety of convincing characters. Crockett's expressive face and voice contribute a good deal of the dramatic energy to this performance. His wordless caricature of a freezing drunk is quite good, and his old sailor's piratical voice is a treat.

Light designer Lance Jacobson (whose lighting is subtle and successful) debuts as one of the readers. He is sometimes ill at ease, particularly when he must read from a book.

But interestingly enough, Jacobson is much more effective when he acts. His appealing portrayal of a passerby accosted by Jensen who is searching for Thomas shows promise.

Shirley Fischer, the one woman in the small cast, portrays a variety of characters well. Her schoolmarm, her barmaid, and her coquettish young girl are equally convincing, and her reading is smooth.

This kind of performance is much more demanding than it might seem. Although the language is stunning and the physical action is minimal, this places a great burden on the performers, whose voices alone must sustain dramatic movement. Sustain it they do, and this slender slice of Thomas's life, a glorification of the joys of boyhood, offers an unusually gentle glimpse into the tormented life of Dylan Thomas.

Bedroom-bounded tussle

JANE TYLER assists wounded "hubby" Jim Holbrook back into bed in the Studio Theatre Restaurant production of Alan Ayckbourn's Bedroom Farce. The comedy continues Thursdays through Sundays until Nov. 24. Dinner and show tickets are $22.50.

ON STAGE

The Rack of Dreams

Unicorn Theatre Presents in association with Carl Cherry Foundation will stage The Rack of Dreams.

Adapted and staged by Dan Gotch from the poetry, plays, letters and stories of Dylan Thomas, The Rack of Dreams places Thomas' lyrical language into a theatrical setting.

The theme of Dylan Thomas in middle age searching for the childhood self he left behind in Wales permeates this adaptation. In searching for this childhood self, he poetically stumbles through his past with humorous, nostalgic and touching anecdotes about teaching school, bank holidays, the pubs and cafes of Swansea, girls, fairs and the ever-present sea.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 2-3, at Cherry Hall, Guadalupe and Fourth, Carmel. Donation is $5; $4 for students and seniors. Tickets: 624-7491.

Cal Rep receives challenge grant

AN ANONYMOUS donor has pledged a $50,000 challenge gift to The California Repertory Theatre providing Cal Rep raises a matching amount by the end of its 1984 season, Dec. 23.

The donor has specified that monies raised must come from individuals and businesses and that foundation grants are not eligible for the challenge. This challenge, when met, will be a tremendous boon toward financial relief as well as future grant procurement.

Many foundations have indicated that if Cal Rep successfully completes its current season, the prospects for receiving grants next year will be favorable.

According to a news release, California Repertory Theatre extends its plea to individuals, community leaders and businesses to help them meet this challenge.

For further information, call 372-0750.

'Baby decision' workshop begins

Am I ready to be a parent? What changes will it mean in my relationships and my career? These and other questions about parenthood will be the subject of "The Baby Decision," a three-part series offered during November by Planned Parenthood of Monterey County. The program is for couples and individuals considering parenthood.

Featured in the workshop will be presentations about medical information on postponing child-bearing, a panel of parents and nonparents discussing their personal experiences and practical decision-making activities. The program is ideal for couples, but will also provide homework activities for participants to work with their partner at home on this important decision.

The format will provide an opportunity for structured discussion of implications for career, finances and relationship.

Historically in the United States, the average woman had both her first and last child between 20 and 30.

The series begins at 7 p.m. Nov. 13 and will meet for three Tuesdays in Nov. Preregistration is required. The fee is $25 per person and $40 per couple. Call Planned Parenthood for information and registration, 394-7939.

FIRE LINES
BY MITCH KASTROS

Safeguard your home

THE CARMEL Volunteer Fire Department feels the need to present a public education and awareness program to the people of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

With the help of the Carmel Pine Cone, we hope to reach a majority of Carmel residents through a monthly newspaper column. The column will deal with letting the public know of fire hazards around the home and business and explain how to eliminate those problems.

It will also include advice and helpful hints on fire safety, prevention, and how to plan and prepare for emergencies. There will also be special pieces on seasonal fire hazards and how to deal with them.

In addition, we want to get in touch with the people of Carmel and teach them about their fire department and what it is all about. The column will tell about the different aspects of the Carmel Fire Department — who runs it, what we do and why we do it, and the special people who keep it going.

The Carmel Volunteer Fire Department was formed in July of 1915, just 15 months before the city of Carmel-by-the-Sea was incorporated. The group of men who formed the department had a common interest and spirit to provide a useful service to the community. That interest and spirit has been kept alive for more than 69 years, surviving good times and bad.

The volunteer fire department has had a proud tradition of providing top-quality emergency services to the city of Carmel and surrounding areas. These services have been provided by some top-quality men and women who live and/or work in town. We are constantly looking for more volunteers to help us carry on the tradition. People interested in becoming volunteers with the Carmel Fire Department may call us at 624-1718 for more information.

In addition to providing fire protection to the city, the volunteers provide emergency medical care and emergency transportation to Community Hospital. This is a free service provided by the fire department and the American Red Cross. Those of us in the ambulance service are specially trained and constantly retrained in the emergency medical field to give the best possible service to our patients.

We can't stress enough that the ambulance service we provide is for emergency only. This means that the patient has had a sudden onset of pain and needs immediate emergency-room care. It also means red lights and sirens.

Our department has grown into the busiest one on the entire Monterey Peninsula, and it is essential that our ambulance be made available for emergencies only. We currently run between 1,000 and 1,500 calls per year — mostly medical. This service is provided by volunteers who have other full-time jobs, and is being provided at all hours of the day and night.

It is our policy and that of the American Red Cross that we do not transport non-emergency medical transfer patients to the hospital or to doctors' offices. People who need an ambulance for transportation may call the commercial ambulance in Monterey, Peninsula Medics, at 394-4433 or 394-4434. If the Carmel ambulance responds to a call and we find it to be a non-emergency, we will transfer the patient to Peninsula Medics to free our ambulance for emergency calls.

WINTER IS just around the corner, so now is a good time to do a few simple things to make your home fire safe.

It's a good idea to have your fireplace and chimney checked once a year, and cleaned if needed. People who use their fireplaces regularly should have their chimneys checked more often and cleaned annually.

The soot buildup from many fires tends to accumulate and will act like a giant piece of charcoal in your chimney. A hot fire in the fireplace can ignite this buildup and create a very hot fire in the chimney, which is both dangerous and damaging to the structure. Keeping the chimney cleaned greatly reduces the chances of this happening.

The best way to get your chimney cleaned is to have it done by a licensed chimney care company. You can find them in the Yellow Pages under "Chimney Cleaning and Repairing." Many offer free estimates, free inspections and senior citizen discounts.

A helpful hint when burning in your fireplace is not to load it with more wood than it can handle. This creates a fire that may be too hot, which will make a chimney fire more likely if the chimney is "dirty."

Also, open a window slightly to allow some air to circulate around the room. This will keep the oxygen in the room from being cut off by the fire, which is especially important in small rooms with a limited supply of air.

Remember, if you ever have a fire inside your chimney, call the fire department. We have special equipment for fighting chimney fires, so don't try to put it out yourself.

A quick and simple way to make sure your furnace is fire safe is to check the filter. Since this is the time of year you will be using your heater the most, it is a good idea to replace a dirty filter. Not only is it a safe thing to do, but your furance will run more efficiently with a clean filter, so it will save money.

While you are checking your furnace filter, you might want to vacuum or dust off the cobwebs and dirt that may be accumulated on and around the furnace. This is a very quick and easy way to make your furnace fire safe.

•

CARE OF floor furnaces should involve vacuuming lint and dirt from in and around the heater and checking to make sure that nothing has fallen into the heater that shouldn't be there. Also, make sure rugs are not touching or too close to the heater, and please don't drape wet clothing over a floor furnace for drying. This is a very dangerous practice since floor furnaces get much hotter than other types of heaters.

If you suspect your furnace or any other gas appliance has a gas leak, or would like to have it checked anyway, PG&E provides this service free of charge. Call them for an appointment.

The California Health and Safety Code (Section 19881) says: "No person shall, on or after Jan. 1, 1972, sell or offer for sale, any new or used unvented heater, which is designed to be used inside any dwelling house or unit, with the exception of an electric heater, or of decorative gas logs for use in a vented fireplace."

Please restrict the use of kerosene heaters to what the code refers to — specifically, garages and working areas that are property ventilated. These heaters use a great deal of oxygen, so they need plenty of fresh air. These heaters get very hot, so make sure they are away from flammable liquids, combustibles and toxic substances.

If you need to use a portable electric heater, make sure it is the kind that will shut itself off in case it is tipped over. Also, remember to place it in a safe spot in the room, and make sure there is adequate ventilation.

Valley peace activist honored

By ROBERT MISKIMON

'I DON'T think women would ever start wars because of all their experience raising and nurturing children."

Rosemary Matson of Carmel Valley, feminist, writer and peace activist believes the full impact of the women's movement is just now being felt in global politics.

As recipient of the eighth annual Ralph Atkinson Civil Liberties Award from the Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, Mrs. Matson has been recognized for 40 years of work in the area of human rights.

The citation for the Atkinson Award noted that she "has struggled for human rights for more than four decades from California to Alabama to Chicago to Hawaii, has pursued the quest for peace throughout the United States and throughout the world, has championed the cause of women's true equality in its many aspects throughout her life, and in her manifold activities has set an inspiring example of dedication, integrity, courage and strength of purpose."

ROSEMARY MATSON of Carmel Valley was honored Saturday, Oct. 20 by the Monterey County Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union with the eighth annual Ralph Atkinson Civil Liberties Award.

"Women have a different perspective," Mrs. Matson told the Carmel Pine Cone/-Carmel Valley Outlook after she received the award Oct. 20 at Santa Catalina School in Monterey.

"In moving out of our own natures, we are less competitive and more cooperative. It's men who have started the wars," Mrs. Matson said.

But despite this rhetoric, what about female leaders like Golda Meier and Margaret Thatcher?

"They are women who are still following male patterns," Mrs. Matson said. "

"With women, there can be a win/win situation and not a win/lose situation. Women have a different sense of power. Men are afraid to give power, but women empower each other.

"Only within the last six to eight years has it become possible for women to make a difference in the peace movement," she said. "I think the feminist way of looking at things — nurturing, caring, preserving life — are very much needed now.

"When more women are in decision-making positions, it will show up in priorities. More emphasis will go into human services, education, and poverty."

•

MRS. MATSON is a co-founder and director of Continuing the Peace Dialogue — USA/USSR, which organizes tours of American citizens to the Soviet Union, where Americans and Russians discuss peace issues and golbal politics.

She had just returned from one of her peace tours to the Soviet Union when the award was bestowed, and she plans another around the first of the new year.

"It's part of a grass-roots diplomacy effort," Mrs. Matson said. "It's harder to point a missile at someone whose face you know. The whole process of turning people into enemies — the whole concept of war and enemy — are outdated. We need to work on our common enemy, which is nuclear weapons.

"We've taken more than 20 people from the Monterey Peninsula there — mostly women. We need to go there and show them Americans all need peace. The average Russian citizen is doing without a lot of things they could have if there weren't an arms race."

There is an active nuclear freeze movement in the Soviet Union that seems to have more political clout than the freeze effort in the United States, according to Mrs. Matson.

"Their peace movement has more support from the general public than ours does," she remarked. "And the Russians think their decision-makers listen to them, maybe more than the freeze people here do. Women in the U.S.S.R. feel they have a role to play there, too."

Mrs. Matson was one of four American delegates to the International Women's Peace Seminar sponsored by the Nordic Women for Peace during the first week of September in Helsinki and Leningrad. Another American delegate was Riane Eisler of Carmel.

She also plans to lead a group of women to Nairobi, Kenya, next July for the United Nations World Conference for Women. Mrs. Matson will lead a workshop on "Women's Role in Transforming 'Enemies' into 'Friends.' "

When she was a college student at the University of California at Berkeley from 1938 to 1940, Mrs. Matson was involved in organizing activities for the AFL-CIO Culinary Workers Union. While married to her first husband, a college professor at the University of Alabama, she headed a drive to have pasteurized milk sold to blacks, instead of the raw milk that was traditionally sold them. She also worked to have wages for black domestic workers increased.

•

LATER, when she moved with her now-divorced husband to Chicago, Mrs. Matson served as a volunteer in the Abraham Lincoln Centre — the first interracial and recreational center in Chicago.

Associated with the American Civil Liberties Union since 1949, she helped organize the Honolulu, Hawaii, chapter in the early 1950s while she also served as a community labor organizer for plantation workers and longshoremen.

Upon her return to California in 1955, Mrs. Matson continued and intensified her work in the area of women's rights and peace. In 1957 she married The Rev. Howard Matson — now a retired Unitarian minister. Howard received the Atkinson Award in 1980.

"I became a Unitarian in the late 1940s," she explained. "I feel this gives me a platform to operate from. My husband and I have worked with Cesar Chavez and the United Farm Workers. We helped to buy a generator to heat and light Alcatraz Island when the Indians occupied it."

Here's what the ACLU had to say about Mrs. Matson when her award was given:

"In presenting the Ralph Atkinson Award to Rosemary Matson, we honor a woman of uncommon courage, integrity, and unwavering strength of purpose in a common struggle fought on so many fronts."

Annual faculty concert

MPC dancers soar

THE MONTEREY Peninsula College Dance Department will present its annual Faculty Dance Concert at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 2 and 3, in the MPC Theater.

Included on the evening's program are a number of solos and duets danced by faculty members Dawn Sare, Walter White and Janet Butler, as well as guest performers from throughout the Monterey Peninsula. One duet, titled "Edges of Illusion," features White and Ms. Butler in a comedic dance piece sharing just one costume.

Guest performers will include several dancers who are new to the peninsula. Jennifer Clark and Christine Belleci, both teachers of dance at the Monterey Dance Workshop, will perform a duet, "New Friends," and Ms. Clark will also dance in solo to Lionel Richie's "Hello."

April Brannan, currently working as assistant teacher for the Seaside High School Dance Class, will perform a duet with Janet Walter titled "Flowers from a Misanthropic Lover."

A highlight of the program is a piece titled "Naming the Animals," choreographed by Ms. Sare, which features a visual backdrop of animal drawings by students of Georgia Booth's third-grade class at Robert Down School in Pacific Grove.

General admission to the concert is $4, students and seniors $3, with tickets available at the door. For advance reservations, call the MPC Physical Education Office, 646-4220.

County government explained in new booklet

THE GOVERNMENT of Monterey County, a 44-page booklet, has been published by the Monterey Peninsula League of Women Voters and is available locally.

Illustrated with charts and pen-and-ink drawings, The Government of Monterey County contains a factual description of county government structure and of the functions and services of the various departments, from the agricultural commissioner to the zoning administrator.

Highlights include a discussion of the county supervisors' multiple roles and an explanation of what the more than 100 special districts do. There is also a "yellow pages" section listing the addresses and telephone numbers of county services.

Know Your County and Know Your City studies are a League of Women Voters tradition, frequently done as the first project of a new local League for the information of members and general public alike. The Monterey Peninsula League has completed several studies of county or city government in its 57 years of activity, but this is the first time it has produced a "citzen's guide" in printed form.

Twenty League members gave many hours of time in the past year to researching, interviewing county officials and writing. County supervisors, the county administrative officer, and department heads cooperated.

Members of the Monterey Peninsula League's sister League in Salinas read drafts and made suggestions. Graphic artist Elena Young of the De Young Studio donated the illustrations. Printing costs were paid by the contributions from the League of Women Voters Education Fund, the Janet Farr and Mary Louise Long Memorial Funds, community businesses and individuals.

The Government of Monterey County will be distributed free to schools, libraries and other public institutions. It is available to business groups and organizations and the general public for a donation of $2 per copy. For information on how to order, call 624-7111.

International travels bind Cal Rep couple horizons sent them to New York for three years.

It was a time of separations for the couple, as Ken obtained work as stage manager for the Producers' Foundation. New York City was simply a jumping-off point for him as he went on tour to North and South Carolina and Atlanta. They were able to see each other weekends when Ken was hired by Center Stage in Baltimore, a community which, like Monterey, has a newly built aquarium.

"Neither of us had lived in a major city," she observed. "We found a place within three days of living there. For $350 we got a basement on the upper west side. To go to the bathroom you had to go through the laundry room. We slept in a loft. In two weeks Ken was touring and I was there alone. I shook the first few nights."

•

KEN RECALLED the apartment. "Our neighbor was a jazz musician who came home and practiced at 2 a.m."

"And we'd never experienced banging pipes," Karen interjected.

Ultimately they moved to a Jamaican neighborhood in Brooklyn, and Karen said: "I become much more of a New Yorker than Ken did."

Karen auditioned, and was selected, to study under Uta Hagen, author of Respect for Acting.

"It was tough; she only teaches four classes," she recalled. "You don't even see her at first, but audition before a board. I auditioned with a good 800 or 900 people."

Having made the first cut, Karen performed a scene from Ludlow Fair with another actress, and was accepted into the classes.

"In New York City, even when unemployed, you could still polish your craft," she said. "That was one thing I liked about it. Broadway didn't hold an allure for me. Here I am doing nine different roles or more. In New York you do the same roles for three or four months."

At first they didn't need an actress, but Ken was employed as stage manager.

"Again timing and luck came in," Ken recalled. "One actress had to be replaced and I took over as artistic director. I got to direct nine shows and Karen was in seven."

Ken maintains they are a very good working team, appreciative of the criticism and suggestions of the other.

"I often assume a different role as director," said Ken. "She knows when I'm bullshitting people. She won't take any and she's my best critic."

This summer, Ken directed Foxfire for the Western Stage in Salinas. He missed his wife's reactions during rehearsal since she was tied up at Cal Rep nightly.

"She couldn't see Foxfire until two weeks into the run," Ken stated. "I really missed her help. She views it from an actor's viewpoint. Sometimes Karen will see a play of mine and she'll say I can go a step farther."

Not only the nearby Pacific, but also California Repertory Theatre drew praise from the stage manager.

"Cal Rep is, for me as a director, a beautiful theater," he said. "No seat is more than nine rows from the stage. We've worked in 3,000-seat houses where no one will move a prop because of the union."

Cal Rep filed under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code Sept. 17. But if the theater survives into another season, Ken said he has been asked to return as stage manager. Selection of actors has yet to take place for next season.

In the meantime, Karen treads the boards as Sarah in The Norman Conquests by night and begins rehearsals for A Christmas Carol this week.

They've taken a home on David Avenue in Pacific Grove. Ken built a coffee table. Karen has caught up on her reading. Children are a "someday" notion.

And when this season ends, they hope to pull up stakes once more and travel New Zealand, maybe Hawaii.

"Once you start traveling, you can't beat it," the actress acknowledged.

Texas stitcher displays designs at Evans Gallery

WINNIE McFarlin Lay of San Antonio, Tex., will exhibit her stitcheries in the Marjorie Evans Gallery at Sunset Center in Carmel. A reception to meet the artist is planned from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday, Nov. 2.

Lay uses materials and yarn to create contemporary wall hangings, most of which depict scenes of the Southwest. To create her sticheries, she uses various colors and textures of fabric to make her designs.

These are placed on a background, and when they are arranged as she wants them they are sewn in place. Yarn is then used to highlight and embellish the design as well as add more texture, the "icing on the cake" so to speak.

Ms. Lay studied design at San Antonio College and took a brief stitchery course with the late Martha Mood of San Antonio and San Francisco. She has taught stitchery and batik at Trinity University, San Antonio, and the Institute of Texan Cultures, University of Texas at San Antonio.

Ms. Lay has shown her work at the McAllen International Museum, University of Texas at San Antonio, and the San Antonio Junior League's Bright Shawl Show. Some of her one-woman shows have included Laredo, Longview and San Antonio, Tex., and Pebble Beach.

Her works are in the collections of Bill Blass, New York; Mr. and Mrs. John Hicks, Carmel; Mrs. W.E. Watson, Hilton Head Island, South Carolina; and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Power, Houston and Perth, Australia.

Ms. Lay will conduct a one-day workshop at Monterey Peninsula College on Saturday, Nov. 3. Her exhibition at the Marjorie Evans Gallery will be open free from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and most nights of performances in the Sunset Theater.

EARLY MORNING,* a colorful tapestry shown with its creator, Winnie McFarlin Lay, is among the stitcheries displayed at Marjorie Evans Gallery in Sunset Center. The public is invited to meet the artist from 4 to 6 p.m. Friday, Nov. 2. Sunset Center is at San Carlos and Ninth in Carmel.

Local groups win program grants

THE FRIENDS of Photography and Monterey County Symphony received two of four organizational program grants awarded locally by the California Arts Council.

Friends of Photography was given $5,273 and the Monterey County Symphony $4,047, according to a report published by the Arts Council.

The California Arts Council was established to promote artistic awareness and participation in California. It is a state agency that provides grants and technical assistance to non-profit arts organizations. Grant applications are reviewed and rated by outside peer panels and receive final approval from the appointed 11-member council.

A total of 387 organizations received $5,248,700 for the 1984-85 funding cycle. Marilyn Ryan, arts council director, commented: "This year's grants to organizations will reach even more artists and audiences than last year's."

To compete for these annual awards, organizations must be tax-exempt, non-profit and engaged in arts programming grants in California for at least three years. They must provide matching funds equivalent to the grant awards.

The two other grant recipients in Monterey County are the Pacific Grove Art Center Association, which received $2,023, and radio station KUBO in Salinas, which was awarded $6,231.

Art collection care discussed by experts

"Care and Maintenance of Your Collection" will be the topic of discussion for Don Pierce and Rosanne Esposito of Art and Frame Service at 11 a.m. Monday, Nov. 5 in the Monterey Peninsula Musuem of Art, 559 Pacific St., Monterey.

Pierce, the founder of Art and Frame Service in San Rafael, and Esposito, a paper conservator for Art and Frame Service, will focus on works on paper during their presentation.

The free lecture, according to Esposito, will "make people aware of the care of their artwork: what things damage artwork and how to take care of artwork."

Pierce has been involved in perfecting the materials and techniques of art conservation, restoration, and presentation for 25 years, 15 of which included his association with J.V. Toschi, a highly regarded fine art restorer in San Francisco.

Esposito joined Art and Frame Service in 1980 after he received a master's degree. She has researched the conditions which contribute to the deterioration of paper and the techniques necessary to correct them. Both have presented lectures, seminars, and workshops on conservation of art and on framing in numerous cities in the United States, England, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Japan.

PEGGY OLSEN'S seascapes will be displayed Friday, Nov. 2 through January 10 at the Monterey Conference Center, One Portola Plaza in Monterey. Her paintings can also be seen at Rose Rock Gallery in Carmel.

Award-winning Monterey artist shows her seascapes

A SELECTION of seascapes by Monterey artist Peggy Olsen will be displayed at the Monterey Conference Center from Friday, Nov. 2, through Jan. 10.

Ms. Olsen, a first-place winner at the 1984 Monterey County Fair Art Exhibit, has had a number of one-person shows on the Monterey Peninsula and also had her work displayed in a one-person exhibition in Oakland during the spring of 1984.

"There's a vibrant use of color throughout the work," Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art Assistant Curator/Registrar Rick Deragon said. "It's extremely liquid and painterly.

"The artist's empathy towards nature and apparent joy for the printing and painting process makes the work exciting."

Ms. Olsen, whose art instruction includes classes through Monterey Peninsula College and Carmel Adult School, also has had work on display through the Art Co-op in Berkeley and the Waterfront Gallery on Cannery Row and currently has work in the Rose Rock Gallery in Carmel.

Museum on Wheels seeks volunteers for art in schools

THE MUSEUM on wheels, an educational outreach program of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, is searching for volunteers to assist with the 1984-85 schools program.

The Museum on Wheels travels to schools with a colorful collection of handmade folk art from more than 45 different countries. A school visit begins with an assembly program using slides, artifacts, music and dance to introduce children to folk art from many parts of the world before viewing the exhibition.

Students of all ages gain a greater appreciation for various cultures by learning about the art made and materials used in different regions of the world, according to Museum on Wheels Director Kay Cline. Craft workshops are taught to offer students the experience of learning traditional craft techniques, such as folding paper in the Japanese style or coiling a basket using African techniques.

A Museum on Wheels volunteer works closely with the staff participating in assembly programs, tours and craft workshops.

Volunteer training will begin Oct. 23. Those interested in participating should call the Museum on Wheels at 373-2061 for additional information.

Assorted winter art programs offered

THE PACIFIC Grove Art Center will continue its program of outreach and education with classes for the winter season.

A continuing class in children's multimedia taught by Joyce Lair continues Fridays, from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. in Gallery 19. Students receive instruction in collage, monoprints and painting. Lair is a recipient of the prestigious Vanderlip Art Fellowship and studied art in Paris and at the Minnesota School of Art. The class is supported by a grant from the Crosby Children's Fund, and space is limited. There is a registration fee of $10, and the class is for children eight to 12 years old.

An animation class also is being offered for children eight to 12 years old on Saturdays, from 9 to 10 a.m. through Dec. 15. Taught by Marge Dean, former director of the Alabama Filmmakers' Co-op and recipient of a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship. She received a master's degree in fine arts, specializing in film, video and photography, from the University of California at San Diego.

The class instructs children in the fine art and techniques of film animation. Students working on group and individual projects will explore animation techniques from pixilation to clay animation to cartooning and much more. An open screening of the students' animation films will be held at the conclusion. Tuition is $40. Supplies cost $20.

A screenwriting workshop and seminar is planned Nov. 5, 7 to 10 p.m.; Nov. 7, 7 to 10 p.m.; and Nov. 10, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The class is designed for both the novice and experienced writer interested in developing and writing a motion picture or television script. A step-by-step outline of screenplay and teleplay components from the original idea through the actual writing, polish and marketing of the script will be provided. Materials will include motion picture and television scripts and the viewing of the corresponding video for questions.

Also available is a class for the advanced student. Accompanying the basic workshop will be a 12-hour intensive for advanced students having completed or in the process of writing a screenplay. Advanced students wishing to have their scripts edited and analyzed by the instructor should submit them no later than Nov. 1. The tuition for the workshop is $75; additional tuition for the intensive is $50. The advanced intensive is scheduled by request.

The instructor of the screenwriting class is Madeline DiMaggio. She has worked as a Hollywood freelancer and studio contract writer for the last 10 years. Her credits include six movies for television and 21 episodic television shows, in both the dramatic and comedic format, including Hart to Hart, Fantasy Island and Bob Newhart. While under contract to Paramount Studios and NBC, she worked as a creative consultant and story editor and developed six pilots for television. A new resident of the Monterey Peninsula, she is currently writing a motion picture.

'Port-a-potti' inspires project

'Mossback' image battled

By ANNE PAPINEAU

IS CARMEL-by-the-Sea a community of artistic mossbacks?

There are those who would say this town is no longer privy to the cutting edge of artistic fervor, that its painters, sculptors and photographers have grown a bit too smug to make artistic waves — much less a design squall.

But the Carmel creators of a new "mural" battle that premise, generating — if not waves — an artistic ripple sensed from Camino Real to the San Carlos Street offices of this newspaper.

"I see this and I see Carmel again," commented Josie Boyer in reaction to the "mural" executed on a port-a-potti near her home on Camino Real between 12th and 13th avenues.

If the subject matter is classical — fig-leafed Adam and serpent in a buff-colored paradise — the structure it embraces can hardly be described in equally conventional terms.

Its inspiration, explained Mrs. Boyer, who incidentally helped execute the Biblical scene, was a Durer engraving of Adam and Eve. "We looked at Durer. They're really a combination of all the Adams and Eves we've ever seen invented. The medium is waterproof felt-tip pens and brown wrapping paper."

As explained by Mrs. Boyer, she and neighbor Belinda Vidor Holliday "didn't like the look of the blue thing" camped at a construction site on their street. So the self-described "loving, interested neighbors" took felt-tip pen in hand and decorated the port-a-potti in the artistic spirit of Old Carmel.

"My husband thought I should go into business doing this," stated Mrs. Holliday, an artist more familiar with oil paints and watercolors. "But I thought my art could go to a higher plateau. At least it (the outhouse) is fun to look at."

"I think its quite attractive considering what we started with," Mrs. Boyer said. "My four-year-old grandson really liked doing the serpent."

Watercolorist Sam Colburn agreed.

"I think it's a marvelous improvement in society when a back house becomes a front house. This is a real treat to have privy art."

Mrs. Boyer said the construction workers haven't filed comment on the decoration yet.

"The poor guys get trapped inside the john," she said. "A bunch of people come down the street and the workers can't get out because there are all kinds of people standing outside the door looking at the pictures."

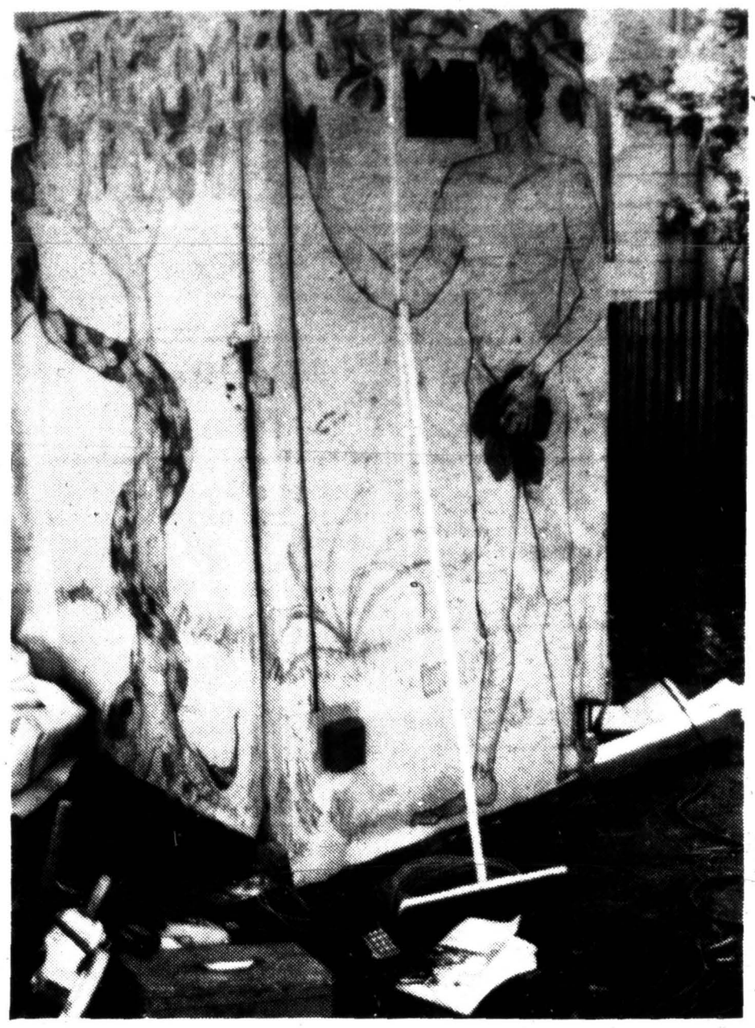
Will the creators of this new art form blemish the purity of their intention? Indeed, will they "sell out?"

"Somebody offered us 25 cents for it," she responded.

"I did hear one of the workers say something that this thing is getting more attention than the house they're building," noted Mrs. Holliday.



"LITTLE blue house" on Camino Real between 12th and 13th avenues was decorated in the night in the artistic spirit of Old Carmel. (Photo by Michael Gardner.)
